Mexico City, March 1.—A request to the people of the United States to extend all possible encouragement and aid to the Mexican people in their efforts to a good government is contained in the resolutions published by the American Colony in Mexico City today.

The Americans held a mass meeting last night at which speakers deprecated the publication in United States of the articles misrepresenting conditions in Mexico and the public statement that during the struggle fighting Americans citizens sought safety under the British flag was also denounced. United States Ambassador Wilson was praised for "noble and patriotic service."

To Fight Carranza.
General Cheche Cantares and his force of 1,200 men will join the government troops under General Auero in a campaign against the rebel general, Carranza in the state of Coahuila according to a dispatch received today from Torreon. With this addition force General Auero will have approximately 5,000 men in his command.

Carranza is supposed to command 2,000 men. Albert Guajardo, a commander of irregulars and a close friend of Carranza, has joined in the rebellion. He occupies with 500 men the mining camp of Las Esperanzas, Muscuiz, and Ahuila.

Francis Villa, who has reentered Mexico is thought to have joined the former governor, Maytorena, of the state of Sonora, who is in possession of Agua Prieta, Nacari and Fronteras as on the international border.

Rebels Surrender.
Official reports state that 3,500 rebels have surrendered in the state of Tehuila and Vera Cruz, 1900 in the state of Mexico and a number of small detachments in many of the other states. With the surrender of Alberto Fuentes at Aguas Calientes the management of the national railway expect soon to open the central line to Juarez. Rebels still are necessary at Escalon and Rediguez.

General Bellon, Angeles, who was this week appointed military attaché to Belgium was today formally charged with the unwarranted execution of Miguel Garduna during the street fighting in the capital.

GARMENT WORKERS TO RETURN ON MONDAY

All of New York Strikers Will Have Resumed Places Following
Terms of Agreement.

New York, March 1.—Today being Saturday, all of the 50,000 garment workers affected by last settlement of the strike which began on December 30th, returned to their shops, but it is thought that by Monday practically all will have resumed their places. The terms of the agreement provide that there shall be "no discrimination in reemployment." The agreement officially ratified by all unions involved settles for the time being a labor crisis which at its height, affected 300,000 workers. It does not, however, have any bearing on the garment workers strike in Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia and elsewhere.

STATE DEPARTMENT MAINTAINS RESERVE

Has Little to Say in Regard to Colombia's Published Proposition for Panama Settlement.

Washington, March 1.—Owing to the unfinished state of the negotiation officials of the state department maintain an attitude of reserve in regard to the publication by the Colombia government yesterday various propositions for the settlement of the dispute over the separation of Panama. It was stated, however, that the publication was quite accurate in describing the propositions involving the payment of ten million dollars for coaling stations and canal rights. The allowance of special privileges to Colombia in the use of the Panama canal in a legal adjustment of the Colombia claims to the receipts for the Panama railroad and the settlement of the outstanding boundary dispute between Colombia and Panama and were entirely informal.

PRACTICAL JOKERS TRICK SUCCESSFUL

Welsh Military Authorities Prepare to Mobilize Entire Territorial Force For War.

Cardiff, Wales, March 1.—The Welsh military authorities were the victims today of a hoax similar to that which recently caused the entire German garrison of Strassburg to assemble for inspection by Emperor William whose approach was announced by a practical joker.

Military and police officials received apparently authoritative instructions to begin the mobilization of the territorial troops on a war footing. Walls and bill boards were promptly placarded with the mobilization orders and telegrams were sent to all territorial soldiers residing in outlying districts. The arrangements for billeting the men inhabitants of the town were well under way before the hoax was discovered.

The entire squad has been ordered to report at the training camp by next Monday.

BILLS WILL AFFECT PHONE COMPANIES

A Number of Measures Which Are Scheduled for Hearing During
Coming Week.

Madison, Wis., March 1.—Numerous bills affecting telephone companies are before the Wisconsin legislature, and hearings upon all of them are scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday, before the transportation committee.

Bill No. 37A by Assemblyman Smart, would prohibit telephone companies in cities of the first class (Milwaukee only) from collecting in advance any rental for the telephone instruments and fixtures, or for any telephone service rendered, or for any connection of a telephone instrument with the central exchange. The penalty for violation is fixed at $10 to $100.

No. 37A by Mr. Walsh, is designed to require telephone companies and other public utilities to pay their employees twice a month or at shorter intervals. The penalty is $10 to $100 or imprisonment up to one month.

Bill No. 39A by Assemblyman K. A. Johnson (No. 39A) would remove from the present statutes the law requiring telephone companies to secure from the state railroad commission a certificate that public convenience and necessity demand a competing exchange in a community where one exchange exists.

Bill No. 254A by Mr. Medding, requires an annual license fee of $15 from telephone companies, together with percentage upon the gross receipts as follows: Four percent of the total if such gross receipts amount to $500; three and one-half percent if such receipts amount to $500,000 and less than $500,000. Other percentages remain the same in the bill.

Municipal telephone systems, however incorporated, are contemplated in a bill (121A) by Assemblyman Minkley (social democrat). A referendum on the subject is a prerequisite called for in his bill. Systems thus established are to be independent as to supervision and charges from the state railroad commission if his bill should pass in the form he wants it.

Assemblyman Vint (social democrat) has a bill (149A) amending the railroad commission law to bring telephone companies under the state which complete public utility for the use of its conduits, poles or other equipment on, over or under any street or highway whenever public convenience and necessity require such use. The bill also gives the municipal council power to enact rules and regulations as to improved service from such utilities.

No pending measure is of more importance to Wisconsin telephone companies than Senator Tensdale's bill (29S) substituting the ad valorem system of taxation for the present license fee method. At present telephone companies are the only public utilities in Wisconsin not under the ad valorem plan of taxation.

A bill by Mr. Schnitzler (256A) reads: "No person, firm or corporation engaged in the maintenance and operation of a telephone system within the state of Wisconsin shall hereafter make a toll charge or a charge of a similar nature for the use of telephones or for talking over such system between two or more cities, towns or villages within the state of Wisconsin where no such charge was made prior to January 1, 1913."

Mr. Schnitzler also has a bill prohibiting the increase of rates specified in franchises or ordinances granted to public utilities.

As these and other bills are of vital interest to the Wisconsin municipalities, Assemblyman Schnitzler is hopeful that municipal officials will come to Madison to lead their support before the committees.

Seward, Alaska, To Testify in Coal Fraud Prosecutions.

Chicago, Ill., March 1.—After having traveled 157 miles by dog team and 3,896 miles by rail, William H. Whitlusey, former United States marshal at Seward, Alaska, is in Chicago to testify at the trial of the $10,000,000 Alaskan coal land fraud case against Albert C. Frost and others. The case is scheduled for trial before Judge Landis in the Federal court Monday.

Albert C. Frost, the principal defendant, is the former president of the Alaskan Northern Railroad and former president and promoter of the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric road. The eight co-defendants include men residing in Chicago, Spokane and Toronto.

There are two counts in the indictment, which was drawn under what is known as the conspiracy statute. The charge is conspiracy to defraud the United States government of 10,000 acres of coal lands, valued at $10,000,000. The land is situated on the south side of the Matanuska River, extending from Chickaloon to Kings River, and land on the north side of the Matanuska River, near Moose Creek. The alleged conspiracy was begun in Chicago on April 1, 1908. The penalty provided for the offense is a fine of $10,000, or imprisonment for two years on all counts.

Madison, March 1.—The dealings of loan sharks with minors will be hampered if the bill introduced by Assembly J. C. Hamata of Racine is enacted into law. The measure is aimed at a very common evil in large cities. The measure makes it unlawful for any pawn or loan broker to accept as security from a minor any personal property whatsoever as security for money loaned without the written consent of the parent or guardian of the minor. A person found guilty may be fined not more than $100 or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months.

WILSON NO LONGER STATE EXECUTIVE

President-elect Will Be a Private Citizen
Until Inauguration
Day.

Trenton, N. J., March 1.—Woodrow Wilson today ceased to be governor of New Jersey and until next Tuesday when he becomes president of the United States, he will be a private citizen. Mr. Wilson filed his resignation papers to take effect at noon, and planned to be on hand to witness the ceremony at which Senator James Fiedler, present head of the senate, becomes acting governor. This is in accordance with the provision for succession in the state constitution, as there is no lieutenant governor in New Jersey.

Mr. Wilson leaves the governorship of New Jersey after an activity covering a period of two years chiefly to accomplish a far-reaching program of reform set forth in his inaugural address when he took office in January, 1911. Most of the reforms of which Mr. Wilson advocated, he has accomplished, notably the revision of the state laws governing corporations and monopolies, the working men's compensation act, a radical extension of the powers of the public utilities commission, statewide primary law extending the state system to all elective officers including congressmen, United States senators, and the governor, and a stringent corrupt practice act governing primary elections.

The chief reforms which Mr. Wilson proposed but did not obtain at the present session of the legislature include the bill providing for jury commission and an amendment to the primary laws known as the Wisconsin system of second choice voting and the endorsement of the amendment for direct election of United States senators.

SEEK DISSOLUTION OF CORN PRODUCTS REFINING COMPANY

Government Files Anti-trust Suit
Against Eighty Million Dollar
New York Corporation.

New York, March 1.—Dissolution of the Corn Products Refining company, an alleged starch, glucose and syrup trust, is sought by the federal government in a civil anti-trust suit filed here today charging the eighty million dollar combination with entering conspiracies and contracts to destroy competition in violation of the Sherman law.

It is alleged to have kept the prices of corn products at unreasonably low figures to harass and discourage independent manufacturers. Corporations located in Missouri, New Jersey, and Louisiana, together with officers and directors residing in those states, and New York, are made defendants.

Controlling 66 per cent of the entire American production of starch and glucose and 80 per cent of the interstate trade in mixed syrups, the alleged trust is charged with fixing wholesale prices, with manufacturing cheap grade candy at unreasonably low prices, in retaliation against confectioners who buy starch and glucose from independents, with practically suppressing the private brands of mixed syrups of grocers by quoting low prices on its own syrups, and with unlawful threats and contracts to destroy competition.

Aside from dissolution the government asks for an injunction prohibiting the alleged restraint of trade.

E. T. Bedford, president of the Corn Products Refining company, issued here today a statement commenting on the government suit in which he maintains that the defendant's concern has only a fair share of the country's business and has been a factor in reducing the cost of living. "We state these facts," he said, "in the hope that our shareholders, particularly the small holders, may not be unduly alarmed in consequence of this action and be induced to part with their holdings at less than their value."

WEBB BILL IS LAW OVER TAFT'S VETO

HOUSE RE-PASSES THE MEASURE
WITH LARGE MAJORITY FOLLOWING
SIMILAR ACTION IN SENATE.

HAD LEGAL OBJECTION

President Acting on Advice of Attorney General Held That Liquor Bill Was Unconstitutional
—Washington News.

Washington, March 1.—By a vote of 244 to 95 the house today re-passed over President Taft's veto the Webb bill prohibiting shipment of intoxicating liquors into "dry" states. The senate passed it over the veto last night and the bill now becomes a law.

Only one other time in the last 15 years has congress over-ruled a presidential veto, that was when the Rainey River dam bill was passed over President Roosevelt's disapproval.

Held Bill Illegal.
President Taft based his veto almost entirely upon the ground that the bill was unconstitutional in that it virtually delegated to the state control of interstate traffic in liquor when he held that control was vested solely in congress.

Attorney General Wickersham had given an opinion also holding the bill unconstitutional and that the president forwarded to the senate yesterday with his veto message. The senate re-passed the bill promptly last night.

Appropriations Held Up.
Business in the senate was held up today by Senator Newlands who refused to allow a vote on the conference report on the river and harbor appropriation bill because of certain amendments which the conferees on the bill on the part of the house had refused to allow to remain in the bill. The congested state of legislation caused leaders some apprehension for other appropriation bills.

Customs Hearing.
The hearing on the customs reorganization plan lasted several hours. Practically every opponent admitted that plans general desirability, but objected to its application to localities. At the conclusion the president promises to consider the question further.

Democratic Caucus.
The first democratic caucus of the senate of the coming congress was called for Wednesday, March 5. The principal business will be the election of a successor to Senator Martin as democratic leader. Senator Kern of Indiana is expected to be chosen by acclamation.

Army Appropriation.
The conference report on the army appropriations bill was adopted by the senate today, providing a thirty-five per cent increase in pay to officers detailed to the aviation corps of the army.

REPORTED ACCIDENT DENIED BY ADMIRAL

Fletcher Wires Navy Department
That No One Was Hurt or Killed in Target Practice at Vera Cruz.

Washington, March 1.—Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the battleship squadron at Vera Cruz, Mexico, in a dispatch to the navy department, emphatically denied the public reports that one person had been killed and three injured by the explosion of a shell fired from one of the battleships during the target practice yesterday.

Rear Admiral Fletcher says there is no foundation whatever for the story. He points out that the caliber practice of the Georgia and Nebraska which was made to appear responsible for the alleged accident took place at sea out of sight of land and more than twenty-five miles from La Piedra where the shell was said to have exploded and add: "The greatest care was exercised to see that no boats were in line of our sub-caliber fire or anywhere near." He adds that the Nebraska sailed for Tampico at noon yesterday to permit the Virginia to go down to Vera Cruz to coal.

SUFFRAGISTS DESIRE A MILITARY ESCORT

Fear That Police Will Have Difficulty in Clearing Streets of Washington on Inauguration Day.

Washington, March 1.—Women from all parts of the country arrived in Washington today to participate Monday in the woman's suffrage pageant to emphasize to the people generally and the coming congress in particular, the nation-wide demand for an amendment to the constitution of the United States enfranchising women.

Impressed by the crush in the street yesterday which the police were powerless to control when the New York "hikers" reached Pennsylvania avenue, Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the joint suffrage procession committee, renewed efforts today to procure a military escort for Monday's pageant. She had a conference with Secretary Stimson, urging the need for a military escort to aid the police in clearing the streets. The secretary said he would see if the request could be complied with. The message which "General" Jones' band carried from New York to deliver to President-elect Wilson, was made public today. It is an appeal signed by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Woman's Suffrage association urging Mr. Wilson to recommend equal suffrage in his inaugural address.

BEET GROWERS TAKE ACTION AT MEETING

LOCAL ASSOCIATION DECIDES TO NOT ACCEPT ROCK COUNTY SUGAR COMPANY'S CONTRACT.

QUESTION OF CONTRACT

Question of Weighing and Taring Chief Obstacle as Well as Price Offered—May Compromise Later.

At a meeting held in the City Hall Friday afternoon the Rock county beet growers declared their disapproval of the present contract offered by the Rock County Sugar Company, and the executive committee of the Rock County and Neighboring Counties Beet Growers' Association recommended that the growers accept the contract issued by the United States Sugar Company who have a factory at Madison.

The cause of the conflict of the growers and the factory is due to the new contract that was issued by the Rock County Sugar Company in which the officials of the local factory refuse to allow the growers to receive credit for their beets at the weighing station where the responsibility of the beets transfers to the company's hands.

Rock county beet growers immediately arose and made known their disapproval of the present contract. After a mass meeting of the farmers a committee composed of H. Hemingway, president; C. E. Richards, secretary; A. Vobig, treasurer, and G. O. Sayer and F. G. Hutchinson were elected to represent the growers and they proceeded to investigate the conditions of the sugar industry, and the meeting held at the city hall yesterday afternoon was to report to the growers their deductions.

The real cause of the conflict between the two parties is that the new contract stated that all beets shall be delivered by railroad and weighed by the Western Railway Association at Janesville and that all beets shall be tared at the factory.

The farmers have declared that they cannot afford to raise beets under the present contract because of the great amount of shrinkage that they are forced to stand. The executive committee after conferring with the representatives of the Sugar Factory went to interview the officials of the Madison factory who granted the taring and weighing of the beets at the different weigh stations and offered five dollars a ton for the products and fifty cents additional price if the incoming congress passed no downward tariff on sugar. They also agreed to pay the freight. This contract gives to the farmers their principal demand and most of them have stated their intentions of shipping to the Madison factory.

The price paid for the beets by the Janesville company is as follows: "The Company shall pay for all suitable beets delivered under this contract after making deductions for damaged beets, dirt, leaves, or other refuse and improper topping, at the rate of $5.75 per ton net weight for beets shipped in September and October and at the rate of $6.00 a ton for beets shipped in November, and $6.25 for those shipped in December. Said payments shall be made on the 15th of each month for beets delivered at the factory during the previous month."

Officials of the Rock County Sugar Company give as their reason for changing the contracts the danger of the lowering of the price of sugar by the reduction of the protective tariff and if the incoming congress abides by their platform and change the schedule on sugar it will be a great loss to the company. Roy M. Osborn, general manager of the local factory addressed the growers and explained to them why the company stood to lose money if the tariff of $1.33 per hundred pounds was taken off the Cuban sugar and allowed to compete with the American product.

The condition at the present time is that the company is making the contracts as fair to the growers as prevailing circumstances will warrant and it is not fair for the farmers to expect Captain Davidson, owner of the sugar company to furnish capital made in other lines of business to satisfy their demands.

The company refused to change the present contract and give the growers the right to have their beets weighed and tared at the 120 different weighing stations. Mr. Osborn expressed the company's views in this manner: "If the growers find that they cannot grow beets at those prices don't grow them; but the company cannot take money out of its pocket to make up the farmer's losses."

It is claimed that the beet factory would make more profit with a small amount of beets than with a large crop and as the company has a numerous amount of acres already under contract they are in no immediate danger of a closing down.

All growers, except those in the vicinity of the factory who can easily deliver their beets by wagon, are in favor of shipping their beets to the Madison company. The report of the committee was also in favor of shipping the beets to Madison but it is hoped that some concession can be made from the local company whereby satisfactory prices can be obtained.

The price offered by the other factories is not as favorable as that of the Rock County company for the fifty cents extra that is promised the growers if no legislation is passed lowering the rate of sugar, is merely a promise, for the Democratic Congress is bound by party pledges to lower the rate on sugar. An additional fifty cents will be paid to the producers for beets delivered after December, but the farmers expect no profit from this source.

If the majority of the Rock county growers decide to send their beets to Madison it will meet the loss of employment to many Janesville workmen and the farmers are beginning to realize the situation the sugar factory is contending with.

Numerous farmers have expressed hope that a compromise can be made with the Rock County Sugar Company and keep the profits at home where it belongs. Discussions about reducing the expenses of both interested parties took place and further developments of the controversy will be watched with interest for its outcome is one of vital interest to the Janesville people.

A telegram received from the Racine and Kenosha Beet Growers' Association revealed the fact that the products of that association were in conflict with the United States Sugar Company who operate factories at Madison, Menomonee Falls and Chippewa Falls are steadfast in their demands of $6.50 per ton.

TO EXERCISE CARE IN SECURING LISTS

Clerk and Inspectors of Election Discuss Matters With Reference to Registration Days.

Inspectors and clerks of elections in various precincts of the city held a meeting at the office of Mayor Fathers on Wednesday evening to discuss the law in regard to the coming registration day. Among other things it was brought out and emphasized that only full citizens will be allowed to register, and that they must appear at the polls in person. All foreign-born citizens, in order to avoid any difficulty or delay, should bring their naturalization papers with them to present to the inspectors.

There will be four registration days during the present month, on March 10 and 11, on the 18th, which is primary day, and on the 25th. In order to vote at the primaries voters must register on either the 10th or the 11th or else swear in their vote according to the usual procedure.

Special precautions will be taken to secure a complete and correct registration list at this time, as a result of the new state law which requires that only persons who are full citizens shall have the right to vote. Foreign born residents with only their first papers can no longer have their names on the poll lists.

After the spring election it will not be necessary to register in person on registration days, but the lists will be carried forward by the inspectors and clerks.

Women who are eligible to vote for state and county superintendents of schools at the election in April, should register on one of the four days mentioned in order to vote.

LAYING NEW FROG AT ANDERSON'S CROSSING

A party of section men are busily engaged in putting in a new frog at Anderson's crossing today. The frog has proven to be in an unsafe condition and a party of workmen headed by Charles Manski are tearing up the old rails and replacing them with stronger ones. This crossing has an enormous amount of traffic passing over it and the local men thought it wise to lay a more modern frog before a serious accident resulted from the poor condition of the crossover.

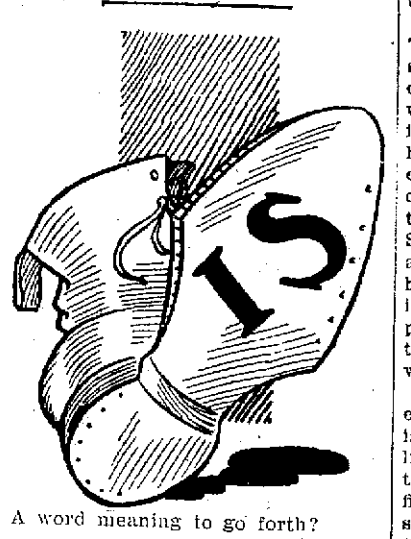

OTTO BRENDLER OF GREEN BAY DIED YESTERDAY MORNING

Otto Brendler, train-master of the Superior division, died early yesterday morning as a result of an attack of pneumonia. Mr. Brendler was well known among the railroad men and had numerous friends among the Janesville men. His office was at Green Bay and the remains will be sent to Cross Plains, home town, by a special train where burial will take place.

Another sign of spring was evident this morning when two advertising cars of the Ringling Circus passed through this city on the 9:35 Northwestern passenger.

The St. Paul turntable demonstrated its troublesome qualities when it balked with engine number 208 which was being brought from the roundhouse. A large force of men were out remedying the trouble and it is thought that the motor was put out of service by being clogged with ice.

The Highest Education

By REV. WILLIAM EVANS, D. D.,
Director of Bible Course,
Meady Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Cease to do evil; learn to do well.—Isa. 1:16-17.

Life's greatest work is the building of character. Our world is a college, events are teachers, happiness is the graduating point, and character is the diploma which is given to man. Character is more than learning and intellect; goodness outshines genius. Character is not so much a thing of intellect as of disposition, therefore should be clothed with goodness.

The only abiding thing, the only thing that you may take with you into the future life, is character. It is a mark of wisdom to look into and prepare for the future. Herein lies the difference between a child and a man, the savage and the civilized, the rich and the poor—the ability to look into and plan for the future. The power of the artist lies in his ability to see the finished picture. Character is the best thing you can leave behind you. A good character is the best tombstone. We are remembered by what we have done. The absence of character is hopeless, weakness and wickedness.

What is Character? Intellectual culture is not necessarily character. It is often argued that intellect and moral development go together. History, however, disproves such a statement. If that were true the peasant, if pious, even though he had no education, would be a Shakespeare or a Milton; then goodness must accompany scholarship and so every scholar would be a moral man, which is not the case. Intellectual culture may be and often is accompanied by character, but it is not identical with it. Did intellect save Solomon from vice, Bacon from bribery, or Byron from immorality? Coleridge says: "All the mere products of the understanding tend to death."

Wealth is not character, although it is often substituted for it. People without character, but with money, often are admitted into respectable society. Wealth in the hands of weak men is a fearful thing. It is not true that money-making has the tendency to banish great thoughts and fine feelings? Why is so much immorality connected with wealth?

Reputation is not character. Character is what a man is, reputation is what men think him to be; and often these two things are reversed by the revelation of the newspapers. Character is what a man is before God; reputation is what he is before men; for eternity. Character is what a man is when nobody is looking. A man's character can no more be strengthened by reputation than a fence by whitewash.

What, then, is character? The word signifies something scored or engraved, and carries with it an abiding significance; so we may speak of character as that which sets forth certain abiding results which have been scored or engraved in the soul of man by the experiences of life. Character is the stamp on our souls of the free choices of good or evil we have been making continually through life. It is that which engraves itself upon all we do. Character is what we are in the hidden recesses and not merely on the surface of our lives; it is not really what men take us to be, but what we are before God as our judge. Character is a true man, a true woman, at their best and highest, living out the dictates of their highest, best and truest natures.

The man of character is truthful. "His armor is his honest thought, and simple truth his utmost skill." He does not profess a thing that he does not intend to do; he does not promise a thing which he knows is not in his power to fulfill. No considerations can justify the sacrifice of truth which ought to be sovereign in all the relations of life. A lie is never justifiable. Some one has said that other vices are virtues compared to lying, yet how lightly esteemed is falsehood. Lying oftentimes assumes the form of diplomacy, expediency, moral reservation, dodging the question, twisting words, and giving wrong impressions.

Character is characterized by modesty and purity. The bloom on a peach is of the very first consideration to its life and perpetuation; and the finest thing about a man or a woman is the fine bloom on the mind and the conscience. This feeling is more effective for our protection than walls of granite or gates of brass. Take care of the delicacy of your mind, retain the power to blush, respect the alarm and shrinking of the soul at the faintest suspicion of evil. Let cynical people call you green; thank God for that color, and see that you keep it, for it is infinitely better than the sere and yellow leaf of a wasted life. Live so modestly, so purely, so resolutely for your God that your whole moral nature shall continue.

"Quick as the apple of an eye,
The slightest touch of sin to feel."

Easy.
It is easy to be popular. All one has to do is to find out what people don't like to hear about.

CHANGE IN INCOME TAX REVIEW BOARD

Favored by Senator L. E. Cunningham of Beloit Who Suggests Important Revisions.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., March 1.—Senator L. E. Cunningham of Rock county believes that the board of review to hear complaints against income tax assessments should be elected by the county board and not selected by the state tax commission, as at present. He has introduced a bill to accomplish this purpose, which will receive the opposition of the tax commissioners, some of whom consider it as an attempt to emasculate the income tax law and weaken its provisions.

The idea back of the plan for allowing the tax commission to make the appointments was that the commission would select persons who were interested in the enforcement of the law and who had made some study of the provisions. The Cunningham bill provides that the three commissioners shall be selected from different parts of the county. His bill strikes out a provision, intended to have the board stand by the income tax assessor. Several other amendments to the income tax law have been introduced by Senator Tensdale of Sparta.

The aim and object of the Cunningham bill is to provide for a board that shall have power to correct mistakes made in the assessment of incomes. Under the present law, after the July meeting of the board appointed by the State Tax commission, there is no remedy for a party who has been assessed an illegal tax by the assessor of incomes.

A number of cases in Rock county could have been settled by such a board while the tax commission or town, village or city officers have no power to act in the matter.

ASK ENCOURAGEMENT
FOR MEXICAN CAUSE

MEMBERS OF AMERICAN COLONY
AT MEXICO CITY DRAFT A RESOLUTION.

AFTER OTHER REBELS

Systematic Efforts Now Being Made by Huerta Regime to Subdue Residents Still Remaining Unloyal.

Mexico City, March 1.—A request to the people of the United States to extend all possible encouragement and aid to the Mexican people in their efforts to a good government is contained in the resolutions published by the American Colony in Mexico City today.

The Americans held a mass meeting last night at which speakers depreciated the publication in United States of the articles misrepresenting conditions in Mexico and the public statement that during the street fighting American citizens sought safety under the British flag was also denounced. United States Ambassador Wilson was praised for "noble and patriotic service."

To Fight Carranza.
General Cheche Camiles and his force of 1,200 men will join the government troops under General Alvaro in a campaign against the rebels. Carranza, who has received today from Torreon. With this additional force General Alvaro will have approximately 5,000 men in his command.

Carranza is supposed to command only 2,000 men. Albert Guajardo, a commander of irregulars and a close friend of Carranza, has joined in the rebellion. He occupies with 500 men the mining camp of Las Esperanzas, Musculiz and Abulita.

Francis Wilson, who has reentered Mexico is thought to have joined the former governor, Maytorena, of the state of Sonora, who is in possession of Agua Prieta, Mazonari and Fronteras on the international border.

Rebels Surrender.

Official reports state that 3,500 rebels have surrendered in the state of Tequila and Vera Cruz, 1900 in the state of Mexico and a number of small detachments in the other states. With the surrender of Alvaro Fuentes at Aguas Calientes, the management of the national railway expect soon to open the central line to Juarez. Repairs still are necessary at Escalon and Rodriguez.

General Felipe Angeles, who was today appointed military attaché to Belgium, was today formally charged with the unwarranted execution of Miguel Garduna during the street fighting in the capital.

Gonzales Is Freed.

El Paso, March 1.—Abraham Gonzalez, the Chihuahua governor, who was deposed and jailed, is a free man today at Chihuahua City. Charges of sedition entered against him by the military authorities are said to have been cancelled on promise that he would use his influence to make peace in the border states.

Claims Mistreatment.

Citizens Kan. March 1.—John Kenneth Turner, the American writer imprisoned in the city of Mexico during the recent revolt, suffered tortures at the hands of Gen. Felix Diaz, was three times threatened with death by shooting, was robbed and imprisoned, and when he appealed to the American ambassador, he was mistreated and abandoned by the latter, according to Turner, received here today by Fred Warren, editor of the Appeal to Reason and credited by the latter to Turner.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Today being Saturday, not all of the 50,000 garment workers affected by last settlement of the strike which began on December 20th returned to their shops, but it is thought that by Monday practically all will have resumed their places. The terms of the agreement provide that there shall be "no discrimination in reemployment." The agreement officially ratified by all the unions involved settles for the time being a labor crisis, which at its height, affected 300,000 workers. It does not, however, have any bearing on the garment workers' strike in Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia and elsewhere.

Walls and bill boards were promptly placarded with the mobilization orders and telegrams were sent to all territorial soldiers residing in outlying districts. BILLS WILL AFFECT
'PHONE COMPANIES

A Number of Measures Which Are Scheduled for Hearing During
Coming Week.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., March 1.—Numerous bills affecting telephone companies are before the Wisconsin legislature, and hearings upon all of them are scheduled for next Wednesday and Thursday, before the transportation committee.

Bill No. 87A by Assemblyman Smart, would prohibit telephone companies in cities of the first class (Milwaukee only) from collecting in advance any rental for the telephone instruments and fixtures, or for any telephone service rendered, or for any connection of a telephone instrument with the central exchange. The penalty for violation is fixed at $10 to $100.

No. 251A by Mr. Walsh, is designed to require telephone companies and other public utilities to pay their employees within a month or at shorter intervals. The penalty is $10 to $100 or imprisonment up to one month.

A bill by Assemblyman K. A. Johnson (No. 332A) would remove from the present statutes the law requiring telephone companies to secure from the state railroad commission a certificate that public convenience and necessity demand a competing exchange in a community where one exchange exists.

Bill No. 294A by Mr. Hedding, requires an annual license fee of $15 from telephone companies, together with percentage upon the gross receipts as follows: Four percent of the total if such gross receipts amount to $500; three and one-half percent if such receipts amount to $500.00 and less than $1,000.00. Other percent ages remain the same in the bill.

Municipal telephone systems, however incorporated, are contemplated in a bill (121A) by Assemblyman Minkley (social democrat). A referendum on the subject is a prerequisite called for in his bill. Systems thus established are to be independent as to supervision and charges from the state railroad commission if they wish to pass in the form of a public utility.

Assemblyman Vine (social democrat) has bill (49A) amending the railroad commission law to bring telephone companies under the statute which compels a public utility for a reasonable compensation to permit the use of its conduits, poles or other equipment on, over or under any street or highway whenever public convenience and necessity require such use. The bill also gives the municipal council power to enact rules and regulations as to improved service from such utilities.

No pending measure is of more importance to Wisconsin telephone companies than Senator Teasdale's bill (20S) substituting the ad valorem system of taxation for the present license fee method. At present telephone companies are the only public utilities in Wisconsin not under the ad valorem plan of taxation.

A bill by Mr. Schnitzler (256A) reads: "No person, firm or corporation engaged in the maintenance and operation of a telephone system within the state of Wisconsin shall hereafter make a toll charge or a charge of a similar nature for the use of telephone or telegraph lines or for the use of telephones or for talking over such lines between two or more cities, towns or villages within the state of Wisconsin where no such charge was made prior to January 1, 1912."

Mr. Schnitzler also has a bill prohibiting the increase of rates specified in franchises or ordinances granted to public utilities.

As these and other bills are of vital interest to Wisconsin municipalities, Assemblyman Schnitzler is hopeful that municipal officials will come to Madison to lend their support before the committees.

LOAN SHARK DEALINGS WITH MINORS PROHIBITED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, March 1.—The dealings of loan sharks with minors will be hampered if the bill introduced by Assemblyman J. C. Hamata of Racine is enacted into law. The measure is aimed at a very common evil in large cities. The measure makes it unlawful for any pawn or loan broker to accept as security for a loan any personal property whatsoever as security for money loaned without the written consent of the parent or guardian of the minor. A person found guilty may be fined not more than $100 or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months.

Assemblyman Gulickson of Barron is the author of a measure by which a person applying for a license to sell must sign and swear to a certificate that the person has been divorced within one year prior to the date of the application; "that neither of them is epileptic, insane or idiot." The measure has been referred to the public welfare committee of the assembly for a hearing.

Scientists for Tubercu-

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, March 1.—The wide spread attention which has been drawn to the tuberculosis serum of Dr. Frederick Friedmann, the young German bacteriologist will be brought to a climax next week according to the announcement made today that on Monday Dr. Friedmann will open office near his hotel on Fifth avenue, and for two weeks conduct a public clinic where the poor as well as the rich will be treated.

The serum will be administered free to those who cannot afford to pay for it. It is announced that a number of American physicians will be invited to attend the clinic and to assist in diagnosing the cases and watch them afterwards and learn Dr. Friedmann's method.

Dr. Friedmann claims that within a week the beneficial effect of the serum will be apparent. The doctor says that more than 5000 applications for treatment have been received.

WILSON NO LONGER
STATE EXECUTIVE

President-elect Will Be a Private Citizen
Until Inauguration
Day.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Trenton, N. J., March 1.—Woodrow Wilson today ceased to be governor of New Jersey and until next Tuesday when he becomes president of the United States, he will be a private citizen. Mr. Wilson filed his resignation papers to take effect at noon, and planned to be on hand to witness the ceremony at which Senator James Fiedler, present head of the senate, becomes acting governor. This is in accordance with the provision for succession in the state constitution, as there is no lieutenant governor in New Jersey.

Mr. Wilson leaves the governorship of New Jersey after an activity covering a period of two years chiefly to accomplish a far-reaching program of reform set forth in his inaugural address when he took office in January, 1911. Most of the reforms of which Mr. Wilson advocated, he has accomplished, notably the revision of the state laws governing corporations and monopolies, the working men's compensation act, a radical extension of the powers of the public utilities commission, statewide primary law, extending the state system to all elective officers including congressmen, United States senators, and the governor, and a stringent corrupt practice act governing primary elections.

The chief reforms which Mr. Wilson proposed but did not obtain at the present session of the legislature include the bill providing for jury commission and an amendment to the primary laws known as the Wisconsin system of second choice voting and the endorsement of the amendment for direct election of United States senators.

Crowds Arriving.
Washington, March 1.—Ready to welcome a new president next Monday and to inaugurate him the following day Washington was draped today in all its patriotic finery and every inconspicuous train passed in crowds of the visiting advance guard.

Cadets from the Georgia Military Academy and Culver Military Academy of Indiana raced into the city at an early hour for the honor of being first to arrive among organizations that are to march in the inaugural parade. The boys from the south and west arrived at about the same time and paraded the streets throughout the day.

Vice president-elect Marshall welcomed the Culver Cadets in front of his hotel early in the day. The boys from his own state are to act as his official guard throughout the inauguration ceremonies. Before noon the expected rush of arrivals for the first democratic inauguration in twenty years was on in earnest, and the streets of the city were filled with the vanguard.

Marshall at Capitol.
The new vice president who had his official day of welcome yesterday was a visitor at the capitol today and looked in on the quarters he is to occupy within a few days, as president of the senate.

Final preparations were made for the welcome to President-elect Wilson Monday afternoon. Mr. Wilson and his family will reach the Union station at 3:45 in the afternoon. After a reception in the presidential room at the station they will be driven to their hotel in carriages.

In the early evening the Wilson family will have a private dinner at their hotel.

Government Files Anti-trust Suit
Against Eighty Million Dollar
New York Corporation.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, March 1.—Dissolution of the Corn Products Refining company, an alleged starch, glucose and syrup trust, is sought by the federal government in a civil anti-trust suit filed here today charging the eighty million dollar combination with entering conspiracies and contracts to destroy competition in violation of the Sherman law.

It is alleged to have kept the prices of corn products at unreasonably low figures to harass and discourage independent manufacturers. Corporations located in Missouri, New Jersey, and Louisiana, together with officers and directors residing in those states, and New York, are made defendants. Controlling 95 per cent of the entire American production of starch and glucose and 80 per cent of the interstate trade in mixed syrups, the alleged trust is charged with fixing wholesale prices, with manufacturing cheap grade candy at unreasonably low prices, in retaliation against confectioners who buy starch and glucose from independents, with practically suppressing the private brands of mixed syrups of grocers by quoting low prices on its own syrups, and with unlawful threats and contracts to destroy competition.

Aside from dissolution the government asks for an injunction prohibiting the alleged restraint of trade.

B. T. Bedford, president of the Corn Products Refining company, issued here today a statement commending on the government suit in which he maintains that the defendant's concern has only a fair share of the country's business and has been a factor in reducing the cost of living. "We state these facts," he said, "in the hope that our shareholders, particularly the small holders, may not be unduly alarmed in consequence of this action and be induced to part with their holdings at less than their value."

Washington, March 1.—Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the battleship squadron at Vera Cruz, Mexico, in a dispatch to the navy department, emphatically denied the public reports that one person had been killed and three injured by the explosion of a shell fired from one of the battleships during the target practice yesterday.

Rear Admiral Fletcher says there is no foundation whatever for the story. He points out that the sub-caliber practice of the Georgia and Nebraska which was made to appear responsible for the alleged accident took place at sea out of sight of land and more than twenty-five miles from La Piedra where the shell was said to have exploded and add: "The greatest care was exercised to see that no boats were in line of our sub-caliber fire or anywhere near." He adds that the Nebraska sailed for Tampico at noon yesterday to permit the Virginia to go down to Vera Cruz to coal.

Washington, March 1.—Women from all parts of the country arrived in Washington today to participate Monday in the woman's suffrage pageant to emphasize to the people generally and the coming congress in particular, the nation-wide demand for an amendment to the constitution of the United States enfranchising women.

Impressed by the crush in the street yesterday which the police were powerless to control when the New York "hikers" reached Pennsylvania avenue, Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the joint suffrage procession committee, renewed efforts today to procure a military escort for Monday's pageant. She had a conference with Secretary Stimson, urging the need for a military force to aid the police in clearing the streets. The secretary said he would see if the request could be complied with. The message which "General" Jones' band carried from New York to deliver to President-elect Wilson, was made public today. It is an appeal signed by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Woman's Suffrage association urging Mr. Wilson to recommend equal suffrage in his inaugural address.

Bill Was Unconstitutional

—Washington News.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 1.—By a vote of 244 to 95 the house today re-passed over President Taft's veto the Webb bill prohibiting shipment of intoxicating liquors into "dry" states. The senate passed it over the veto last night and the bill now becomes a law. Only one other time in the last 15 years has congress over-rudden a president's veto, that was when the Rainey River dam bill was passed over President Roosevelt's disapproval.

Held Bill Illegal.

President Taft held his veto almost entirely upon the ground that the bill was unconstitutional in that it virtually delegated to the state control of interstate traffic in liquor when he held that control was vested solely in congress.

Attorney General Wickersham had given an opinion also holding the bill unconstitutional and that the president forwarded to the senate yesterday with his veto message. The senate re-passed the bill promptly last night.

Appropriations Held Up.

Business in the senate was held up today by Senator Newlands who refused to allow a vote on the conference report on the river and harbor appropriation bill because of certain amendments which the conferees on the bill on the part of the house refused to allow to remain in the bill. The congested state of legislation caused leaders some apprehension for other appropriation bills.

Customs Hearing.

The hearing on the customs reorganization plan lasted several hours. Practically every opponent admitted that plans general desirability but objected to its application to localities. At the conclusion the president promises to consider the question further.

BEET GROWERS TAKE ACTION AT MEETING

LOCAL ASSOCIATION DECIDES TO NOT ACCEPT ROCK COUNTY SUGAR COMPANY'S CONTRACT.

QUESTION OF CONTRACT

Question of Weighing and Taring Chief Obstacle as Well as Price Offered—May Compromise Later.

At a meeting held in the City Hall Friday afternoon the Rock county beet growers declared their disapproval of the present contract offered by the Rock County Sugar Company, and the executive committee of the Rock County and Neighboring Counties Beet Growers' Association recommended that the growers accept the contract issued by the United States Sugar Company who have a factory at Madison.

The cause of the conflict of the growers and the factory is due to the new contract that was issued by the Rock County Sugar Company in which the officials of the local factory refuse to allow the growers to receive credit for their beets at the weighing station where the responsibility of the beets transfers to the company's hands.

Rock county beet growers immediately arose and made known their disapproval of the present contract. After a mass meeting of the farmers a committee composed of H. Hemingway, president; C. E. Richards, secretary; A. Wobig, treasurer, and G. O. Sayer, and F. G. Hutchinson were elected to represent the growers and they proceeded to investigate the conditions of the sugar industry, and the meeting held at the city hall yesterday afternoon was to report to the growers their deductions.

The real cause of the conflict between the two parties is that the new contract stated that all beets shall be delivered by railroad and weighed by the Western Railway Association at Janesville and that all beets shall be tared at the factory.

The farmers have declared that they cannot afford to raise beets under the present contract because of the great amount of shrinkage that they are forced to stand. The executive committee after conferring with the representatives of the Sugar Factory went to interview the officials of the Madison factory who granted the taring and weighing of the beets at the different weighing stations and offered five dollars a ton for the products and fifty cents additional price if the incoming congress passed no downward tariff on sugar. They also agreed to pay the freight. This contract gives to the farmers their principal demand and most of them have stated their intentions of shipping to the Madison factory.

The price paid for the beets by the Janesville company is as follows: "The Company shall pay for all suitable beets delivered under this contract after making deductions for damaged beets, dirt, leaves, or other refuse and improper taring, at the rate of $5.75 per ton net weight for beets shipped in September and October and at the rate of $6.00 a ton for beets shipped in November, and $6.25 for those shipped in December. Said payments shall be made on the 15th of each month for beets delivered at the factory during the previous month."

Officials of the Rock County Sugar Company give as their reason for changing the contracts the danger of the lowering of the price of sugar by the reduction of the protective tariff and if the incoming congress abides by their platform and change the schedule on sugar it will be a great loss to the company. Roy M. Osborn, general manager of the local factory addressed the growers and explained to them why the company stood to lose money if the tariff of $1.38 per hundred pounds was taken off the Cuban sugar and allowed to compete with the American product.

The condition at the present time is that the company is making the contracts as fair to the growers as prevailing circumstances will warrant and it is not fair for the farmers to expect Captain Davidson, owner of the sugar company to furnish capital made in other lines of business to satisfy their demands.

The company refused to change the present contract and give the growers the right to have their beets weighed and tared at the 120 different weighing stations. Mr. Osborn expressed the company's views in this manner: "If the growers had that they cannot grow beets at these prices don't grow them; but the company cannot take money out of its pocket to make up the farmer's losses."

It is claimed that the beet factory would make more profit with a small amount of beets than with a large crop and as the company has a numerous amount of acres already under contract they are in no immediate danger of a closing down.

All growers, except those in the vicinity of the factory who can easily deliver their beets by wagon, are in favor of shipping their beets to the Madison company. The report of the committee was also in favor of shipping the beets to Madison but it is hoped that some concession can be made from the local company whereby satisfactory prices can be obtained.

The price offered by the other factories is not as favorable as that of the Rock County company for the fifty cents extra that is promised the growers if no legislation is passed lowering the rate of sugar, is merely a promise, for the Democratic Congress is bound by party pledges to lower the rate on sugar. An additional fifty cents will be paid to the producers for beets delivered after December, but the farmers expect no profit from this source.

If the majority of the Rock county growers decide to send their beets to Madison it will meet the loss of employment to many Janesville workmen and the farmers are beginning to realize the situation the sugar factory is confronted with. Numerous farmers have expressed hope that a compromise can be made with the Rock County Sugar Company and keep the profits at home where it belongs. Discussions about reducing the expenses of both interested parties took place and further developments of the controversy will be watched with interest for its outcome is one of vital interest to the Janesville people.

A telegram received from the Racine and Kenosha Beet Growers' Association revealed the fact that the products of that association were in conflict with the United Sugar Company who operate factories at Madison, Menomonee Falls and Chippewa Falls are steadfast in their demands of $5.50 per ton.

TO EXERCISE CARE IN SECURING LISTS

Clerk and Inspectors of Election Discuss Matters With Reference to Registration Days.

Inspectors and clerks of elections in various precincts of the city held a meeting at the office of Mayor Fathers on Wednesday evening to discuss the law in regard to the coming registration day. Among other things it was brought out and emphasized that only full citizens will be allowed to register, and that they must appear at the polls in person. All foreign-born citizens, in order to avoid any difficulty or delay, should bring their naturalization papers with them to present to the inspectors.

There will be four registration days during the present month, on March 10 and 11, on the 18th, which is primary day, and on the 25th. In order to vote at the primaries voters must register on either the 10th or the 11th or else swear in their vote according to the usual procedure.

Special precautions will be taken to secure a complete and correct registration list at this time, as a result of the new state law which requires that only persons who are full citizens shall have the right to vote. Foreign-born residents with only their first papers can no longer have their names on the poll lists.

After the spring election it will not be necessary to register in person on registration days, but the lists will be carried forward by the inspectors and clerks.

Women who are eligible to vote for state and county superintendents of schools at the election in April, should register on one of the four days mentioned in order to vote.

The Highest Education

By REV. WILLIAM EVANS, D. D.,
Director of Bible Center,
Meady Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Cease to do evil; learn to do well.—Isa. 1:16-17.

Life's greatest work is the building of character. Our world is a college, events are teachers, happiness is the graduating point, and character is the diploma which is given to man.

Character is more than learning and intellect; goodness outshines genius. Character is not so much a thing of intellect as of disposition; therefore should be clothed with goodness.

The only abiding thing, the only thing that you may take with you into the future life, is character. It is a mark of wisdom to look into and prepare for the future. Herein lies the difference between a child and a man, the savage and the civilized, the rich and the poor—the ability to look into and plan for the future. The power of the artist lies in his ability to see a finished picture. Character is the best thing you can leave behind you. A good character is the best tombstone. We are remembered by what we have done. The absence of character is hopeless, weakness and wickedness.

What is Character?
Intellectual culture is not necessarily character. It is often argued that intellect and moral development go together. History, however, disproves such a statement. If that were true the peasant, if pious, even though he had no education, would be a Shakespeare or a Milton; then goodness must accompany scholarship and so every scholar would be a moral man, which is not the case. Intellectual culture may be and often is accompanied by character, but it is not identical with it. Did intellect save Solomon from vice, Bacon from bribery, or Byron from immorality? Coleridge says: "All the mere products of the understanding tend to death."

Wealth is not character, although it is often substituted for it. People without character, but with money, often are admitted into respectable society. Wealth in the hands of weak men is a fearful thing. It is not true that money-making has the tendency to banish great thoughts and fine feelings? What is so much immorality connected with wealth?

Reputation is not Character. Character is what a man is, reputation is what men think him to be; and often these two things are reversed by the revelation of the newspapers. Character is what a man is before God; reputation is what he is before men; reputation is for time, character is for eternity. Character is what a man is when nobody is looking. A man's character can no more be strengthened by reputation than a fence by whitewash.

What, then, is character? The word signifies something scored or engraved, and carries with it an abiding significance; so we may speak of character as that which sets forth certain abiding results which have been scored or engraved in the soul of man by the experiences of life. Character is the stamp on our souls of the free choices of good or evil we have been making continually through life. It is that which engraves itself upon all we do. Character is what we are in the hidden recesses and not merely on the surface of our lives; it is not really what men take us to be, but what we are before God as our judge. Character is a true man, a true woman, at their best and highest, living out the dictates of their highest, best and truest natures.

The man of character is truthful. "His armor is his honest thought, and simple truth his utmost skill." He does not profess a thing that he does not intend to do; he does not promise a thing which he knows is not in his power to fulfill. No considerations can justify the sacrifice of truth which ought to be sovereign in all the relations of life. A lie is never justifiable. Some one has said that other vices are virtues compared to lying, yet how lightly esteemed is falsehood. Lying oftentimes assumes the form of diplomacy, expediency, moral reservation, dodging the question, twisting words, and giving wrong impressions.

Character is characterized by modesty and purity. The bloom on a peach is of the very first consideration to its life and perpetuation; and the finest thing about a man or a woman is the fine bloom on the mind and the conscience. This feeling is more effective for our protection than walls of granite or gates of brass. Take care of the delicacy of your mind, retain the power to blush, respect the alarm and shrinking of the soul at the faintest suspicion of evil. Let cynical people call you green; thank God for that color, and see that you keep it, for it is infinitely better than the sere and yellow leaf of a wasted life. Live so modestly, so purely, so resolutely, for your God that your whole moral nature shall continue,

"Quick as the apple of an eye,
The slightest touch of sin to feel."

Easy.
It is easy to be popular. All one has to do is to find out what people don't like to hear about.

CHANGE IN INCOME TAX REVIEW BOARD

Favored by Senator L. E. Cunningham of Beloit Who Suggests Important Revisions.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., March 1.—Senator L. E. Cunningham of Rock county believes that the board of review to hear complaints against income tax assessments should be elected by the county board and not selected by the state tax commission, as at present. He has introduced a bill to accomplish this purpose, which will receive the opposition of the tax commissioners, some of whom consider it as an attempt to emasculate the income tax law and weaken its provisions.

The idea back of the plan for allowing the tax commission to make the appointments was that the commission would select persons who were interested in the enforcement of the law and who had made some study of the provisions. The Cunningham bill provides that the three commissioners shall be selected from different parts of the county. His bill strikes out a provision intended to have the board stand by the income tax assessor. Several other amendments to the income tax law have been introduced by Senator Tensdale of Sparta.

The aim and object of the Cunningham bill is to provide for a board that shall have power to correct mistakes made in the assessment of incomes. Under the present law, after the July meeting of the board appointed by the State Tax commission, there is no remedy for a party who has been assessed an illegal tax by the assessor of incomes.

A number of cases in Rock county could have been settled by such a board while the tax commission or town, village or city officers have no power to act in the matter.

Packing Food in Ferns.

In Germany the use of ferns is coming into more and more favor for packing food which is transported either short or long distances. The practice became common in England before it gained equal vogue in Germany, and the results are said to be excellent, especially in shipping fresh fruit, butter, fish and other food products which require unusual care.

Discretion and Valor.

They were discussing at the club the difference between discretion and valor, and it was exemplified by one who said it would be valor to have eaten a Christmas dinner at a fashionable restaurant, and departed without tipping the waiter. And discretion? "Well," he proceeded, "to go to a different restaurant for New Year's dinner would be discretion."

Sport Shop Shots by Dad McCarty

Our old friend, Teddy Burns, has arisen from his pugilistic sepulchre and asserted in a loud and clear, albeit somewhat shaky, voice that he intends to return to his life and take a walk at the present set of white heavy weights. He would rather prefer Luther McCarty. The apparition has caused no great excitement, as he has the habit of making these returns to life. He'd better look out, or one of the real fighters will take him up and put him away for good and all.

Too much high living and the attendant failure to take himself seriously have cost Dixie Walker, one-time promising member of the staff of the Washington Americans, his baseball success. Manager Griffith last year sent him to Baltimore, but Dixie failed even then to tend to business, and was sent to Wilkes-Barre. That team, however, had no use for him and returned him to Baltimore. Manager Dunn of the Orioles still is trying to dispose of him to minor league clubs, but unsuccessfully. Dixie's reputation has gone before him.

The gag at last has been applied to baseball players in the American league. President Ban Johnson has ordered that no players in the future act as newspaper reporters or allow their names to be used as such. It was about time for such action, as very few of the players who signed stories in the past really wrote them and, as moreover, considerable hard feeling among the players themselves was caused by the remarks thus published.

It looks like busy days a-coming for Willie Ritchie. Now that Harlem Tommy Murphy has drawn in twenty rounds with Wolgast and that Rivers has so effectively disposed of tough little Kayo Brown, both can add their demands to that of Wolgast for a bout with Willie. He can hardly hope to dodge them all, nor is it probable that he wants to. A bout with any one of the three should be a great drawing card.

The White Sox are not indulging in any very strenuous training on the Pacific Coast. They only have to take sulphur baths and mud baths, play handball, soccer, football, basketball, racquet, basketball, and do a little running and long-distance walking. The exercise is merely to start the perspiration, you know, and the baths to stop it. Quite simple, you see.

A new indoor pole vault record has been set by John Gold, captain of the Wisconsin University track team. He went 12 feet 6 inches in the gymnasium recently. The previous record was 12 feet 3 inches, made by Walter Dray in Chicago last April.

Packey McFarland is taking things easy in preparation for his fight with Jack Britton in New York March 7. He is nearly down to weight and hard as railroad spikes.

CARDINALS DEFEAT MADISON CLUB TEAM

Local Basketball Five Secures Another Victory in Game Last Night By 29 to 15 Score.

Janesville again added to her many victories when the Lakota Cardinals showed excellent team work and won from the Madison Helmut club, at the rink last night by the score of 29 to 15. The Madison club was scheduled in the place of the Turn Gemeinde Blues who were unable to fill their engagement. Janesville had no easy time winning this game for the playing their opponents was steady and brilliant.

The playing of both teams was faultless and it was only because of accurate basket shooting that the Janesville team obtained such a lead over their rivals. Wilkinson showed star ability and demonstrated a marked improvement over previous games. Besides making six field goals and one foul his passing and team work was the feature of the game. Green also played stellar ball, caging four goals and advancing the ball by his skillful dribbling and dodging. Captain Langdon was unable to play on account of sickness.

Madison showed better playing than the score indicates and played the Lakotas even the greater majority of the game. Crein and Stuel played the best game for the visitors and Stuel, the left guard of Madison, brought the crowd to their feet when he caged the ball after a shot from the center of the floor that was labeled with horse shoes. The first half was more even than the last, for at the end the locals only led by the score of 13 to 6. Intercollegiate rules governed the second half and under this style of game the Janesville team were better able to compete with the students. Cunningham recovered his basket shooting ability this half and added to the score with three baskets. While the game was one of the best this year the attendance was small as compared to that of previous games.

Summary.
Madison Helmut Club—Crein, r. f.; Cabee, l. f.; Knoche, c.; Concoran, r. g.; Stuel, l. g.

Foul Goals—Wilkinson, 1; Knoche, 1.

JANESVILLE VS. RACINE AT ROLLER POLO TONIGHT

Tonight's contest at the rink, between the Janesville Moose Roller Polo team and the leaders of the league, Racine, promises to be the most exciting game of the season. Janesville is in such a position that if she defeats the crack Racine team games, and the entire team worked together for the best time this year. The subs, L. Stewart and Kuhlrow were given a chance to play, and even after they were put in, the scoring was kept up by the locals. The Lake Mills team were fairly heavy, but their lack of experience kept them from winning. The locals are now bidding for high honors at the Beloit tournament next week.

Eloitt Five Loses.
The Beloit high school five, aspirants for the championship of this part of the state, journeyed to Stoughton last night, and returned the defeated team, by the score of 23 to 12. The Stoughton five outplayed their opponents all of the time, and Olson, the star forward for the Stoughton five, contributed 17 of the 22 points for his team.

ED WALSH ONE OF THE MOST REMARKABLE PITCHERS IN NATIONAL GAME'S HISTORY

Ed Walsh.

Edward Walsh, the famous hurler of the Chicago White Sox, and the "iron man" of all modern pitchers, qualified from the jump; from the first ball pitched in his first game at Bridgeport, Conn., in July, 1902, his march to fame has been paved with sensational stunts and great achievements. As the "iron man" of all modern day hurlers he is in a class by himself. No pitcher in the last ten years approaches his record for number of games worked in. His general pitching average during the eight years he has been with Chicago has been .506.

VIENNESE CARNIVAL SEASON IS DULLEST EVER EXPERIENCED

Balkan War and Uncertain International Situation Have Paralyzed Trade in Austria-Hungary.

Vienna, March 1.—Lent brings to a close what is probably the dullest carnival season Vienna has ever seen. There has not been a single court festivity of any kind, the usual public balls have without exception been dismal failures, and there has been practically no private entertaining. The Balkan war and the uncertainty of the international situation have paralyzed trade and industry throughout the dual monarchy, and the complete failure of the carnival season has brought bankruptcy to so many Viennese storekeepers.

At the beginning of the season it was hoped that there might be some one court function, if not a court ball, then at least a soiree. But everything was against it. At eighty-two years of age the emperor finds it impossible to stand the strain of tedious court ceremonial, and his doctors pre-emptorily forbade his taking any risks. His nephew and heir, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, could easily represent him, but being dissatisfied with the position that court etiquette requires his inorganic wife, Princess Hohenberg, to assume, the archduke steadily refuses to take part in any ceremonials at the Hofburg in which women join. The leading archdukes at court, Zita, wife of the next heir to the throne, Archduke Francis Joseph, is only twenty; too young to preside at imposing state ceremonies, and, furthermore, she recently became a mother, presenting her husband with a son who stands third in the succession to the imperial throne. And in other households of members of the imperial family there were various reasons against joining in court festivities this year, so that in the end it was found impossible to arrange even so much as a concert.

The mobilization ruined the public balls. Apart from the enormous expense it entailed and the loss of business, it has taken thousands of men away from the capital, especially a large number of officers who are the life and soul of dances in Vienna. Recognizing the necessity of doing something to help the storekeepers, who had no Christmas trade at all, unusual efforts were made to ensure the success of these public gatherings. But it was useless. The male guests were lacking, and the balls fell flat. At one of the most important of the whole season there were not enough persons present to form the lines through which distinguished visitors are led from the entrance to the dais at the top of the ball room. The death of the aged Archduke Rainer, just ten days before the end of the carnival season caused a general abandonment of public festivities. Secretly the committees of the balls thus given up rejoiced, for it saved them from a very embarrassing situation, since there was not the slightest hope of any of the functions attaining even a passable measure of success.

And now that the social season is finally ended and with it all hopes of the trading classes recouping themselves for the worst Christmas trade in many years, it is feared that many bankruptcies will be recorded. The January figures of insolvencies are the highest since the panic of 1873, especially in the dry goods branches. Wholesale houses of many years' standing are hard pressed to meet their engagements, and retail firms are in an equally bad plight. Everybody is complaining that there is no money to be got, and collectors are going round begging customers to pay debts so trifling that in ordinary times the firms would have waited months before applying for payment.

How Benighted!
Here is a Chinese idea of prosperity in a nation: When the sword is rusty, the plow bright, the prisons empty, the granaries full, the steps of the temple worn down and those of the law courts grassgrown, when doctors go afoot, the bakers on horseback and the men of letters drive in their own carriages, then the empire is well governed.

132 Inch Wheel Base-6 Cylinder Fully Equipped $1850.00

Last year when we talked 6 Cylinder, Long Stroke Motor, a few of the wise ones said, "It will never do," "It is not Practical," "Be Careful."

WHAT DO THEY TELL YOU TODAY?

Do they still argue against the long stroke motor? No! Do they still argue against the 6 cylinder car? No, because 80 per cent. of the builders are today following our designers and building long stroke, 6 cylinder motors.

THEY HAD TO DO IT.

But they are a little late for we have several years start, and that is why we can produce this wonderful car for the money. Not in America is there any car that will compare to it, in design, in power, in wheel base, finish or price. Do not be mislead by idle talk, but investigate OUR FACTORY, OUR SERVICE.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

You never heard of such a year! The cutworm started in the spring To make his garden patch appear A useless and abandoned thing. The clench bug left his wheat a wreck. Rust made his oats unfit to thrash. His corn crop dwindled to a speck. His flax and barley went to smash.

His clover was by drought undone. No little apples could he find. The cabbage withered in the sun. He couldn't even raise the wind! Things went so badly that, indeed, He never knew a year to match; He didn't raise enough to feed. The chickens that he couldn't hatch!

His pumpkins were a sorry sight. His turnips rotted in the ground; Because of the potato blight. No single tuber could be found. A cyclone cut his early hay. He grew no fodder in the fall; But Farmer Jenkins was blasé— He raised his eyebrows—that was all!—Atlanta Journal.

If the Atlanta Journal man had lived in the North, where the most shiftless husbandman is amply rewarded for every ounce of energy expended in raising a crop, and where the soil responds liberally to well directed effort, he might have written in a different strain, but the thrifty farmer, in the land of perpetual summer, is so largely in the minority, that the sentiment expressed fits the situation in many cases.

The southern farmer is excusable, however, for lack of ambition, and it is not surprising when he becomes discouraged. It may be worth something to live in a climate where fuel and clothing cut but little figure in household expenses, and where the high cost of living is not the all-absorbing topic for discussion, but there are many drawbacks, as the northerner finds to his sorrow, when he invades the territory, as many are now doing.

The state of Florida has so much to offer, by way of climate, that it has become the mecca of land promoters, and in spite of the fact that thousands of suckers are garnered, every year, the stock seems inexhaustible, and they continue to come from all parts of the north and west.

Some fifteen years ago the orange industry was paralyzed by a freeze, similar to the one lately experienced in California. Hundreds of groves of young trees, just commencing to bear, were killed, and hundreds of thousands of dollars of northern capital was wiped out in a night.

But the state recovered, and the orange crop this year is the largest ever produced. With Florida oranges at 40 cents per dozen, in the North, it is a revelation to ride through the western part of the state and notice grove after grove, loaded with golden fruit, going to waste because there is no market for it, and it is not worth the picking.

The packing houses at Arcadia, in DeSoto county, stopped buying, a month ago, before the crop was half gathered. Then the growers attempted to market their own fruit in New York. One man shipped two hundred cases and his net return was a check for two dollars. Another man who sent along twenty cases of choice fruit, received $1.17 net. Returns for grape fruit were not much better, and as a result the state is overstocked with fruit.

When the fact is considered that the man who grows oranges, raises nothing else, as a rule, it will be readily understood that he soon loses interest in the game, and yet thousands of northern suckers are investing in the lottery every year, fascinated by the climate, and the fairy tales of smooth promoters.

There are some garden spots in the state where vegetables are grown at a profit, in spite of the fact that they are fifteen hundred miles from market, but the state would soon lose its place on the map but for the crop of tourists, who spend money freely, and are a constant source of revenue, during the winter months.

The press of the state is noted for its loyalty, and every last scribe is a booster. The "Jacksonville Times Union" is trying to induce the farmers to engage in the dairy business, for while the woods are full of cattle, the butter supply all comes from the North, and condensed milk is found on all the tables.

Jacksonville received twenty carloads of butter in January, and the paper estimated that more than one million dollars worth was shipped to this one city every year, but a glance at the native cows explains the situation. They are kept poor, trying to pick up a living, and one Northern Guernsey is worth more than a herd, as a milk producer.

The Southern poet wouldn't have far to go to locate native farmers who "raised their eyebrows," and but little else. The country is a paradise, as long range, with a superb climate, and a happy-go-lucky, native population—a good place for a winter sojourn, and the cheapest state in the union to eke out an existence, because people down here live on their needs and their wants do not trouble them.

The South, just now, is enjoying for the first time in many years, the prospects of a national democratic administration. Wilson was not their choice for president. They wanted Underwood or Clark, because they were Southern men, but Wilson is a democrat, and that covers a multitude of sins.

The people down in this neck of the woods need protection, more than the North, because the little they have to protect means everything to them. With the duty removed from tropical fruit and cane sugar, there would be but little inducement to work, and the country has no incentive to spare.

The people of the South believe in Colonel Roosevelt, and have great admiration for the progressive party. They realize that the colonel's activity brought them political success and they hope to find him an active force in the next national campaign. If the colonel will only stay by the job they have no fear of the outcome.

Colonel Bryan is spending the winter at Palm Beach, and is also a general favorite. His work in the Baltimore convention is appreciated, and they expect him to be rewarded by a place in the cabinet.

"The new freedom," Prof. Wilson's salubrious, strikes a popular chord throughout the South, for it appeals to the common people. They believe in self-government, and are glad to know that the new president is with them.

While the solons at Madison are loading up the state with all sorts of drastic legislation, it is worth while to know that we have a president in sight who is throwing all kinds of advance spasms in the interests of reform.

To his pedagogic mind the fact that the nation has enjoyed sixteen years of unparalleled prosperity, cuts no figure. He is of the opinion that we are too much governed, and that the men on the upward climb need encouragement.

The professor's new text-book should be dedicated to the college over which he presided so long. The American people are not school children, and they have never regarded it a crime to own a dollar, honestly acquired. "The men in the making" may need encouraging, but many of them are receiving it in substantial ways, from "the men who are made," and efforts to stir up class distinction, by the incoming president, are not commendable.

Mr. Wilson overlooks the fact that business is destitute of sentiment, and deplorable as this may be, from his viewpoint, he can not change it. There are many fine-spun theories which are impractical, and his new book is full of them.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

From the Hickeyville Clarion.

A candy pull was held last Friday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Higgins, the proceeds to go toward a fund to buy red flannel chest protectors and car mufflers for the heathen of Tibbuctoo. Outside of a few drawbacks it was quite a success. Uncle Ezra Harkins broke his new teeth that he had from the mail order house only two weeks before, by trying to bite off a piece of candy and several of the teeth got worked into the batch of candy and couldn't be found. Hank Tunnus and Hod Peters, who have both been true and loyal Democrats ever since election, got into an argument over the revision of the tariff from "agate" to "zinc." Hank claimin' "zinc" was spelled with a "k" and Hod claimin' it was spelled with a "q" and they tipped over the stovepipe, spillin' about ten quarts of soot into the whiskers of Erasmus W. Toole, who was lying back of the stove asleep and who started such a row that the constable had to swear in ten deputies to restore order. While Tunnus and Anse Judson's youngest kid set fire to the summer kitchen by smokin' cigarettes and Amory Dicks gave Bushrod Perkins a black eye for askin' to see Miss Pansy Tibbitts home. Miss Amaryllis Teeter sang nine selections. Outside of these regrettable incidents, a pleasant time was had by all. The heathen got $1.40 and cost Lemuel Higgins $45 for repairs.

Miss Euphemia Perkins, on postess of passion, read an article in the Sunday papers entitled: "How to Get Rid of Moles for $2," and she sent $2 to the concern as she had a mole on her chin which had interfered with her matrimonial prospects for some years. Yesterday, by parcel post, she received a fine steel mole trap which sticks in the ground.

Caught on the Fly. "Cleveland Sixth City" is the slogan of the Ohio metropolis, but no Cleveland man has yet tried to say it while intoxicated.

When a man speaks automobilizing as "motoring" it is a clach that his eldest daughter has been abroad. Old Doc Evans of Chicago says ichthyosis is a congenial disease, but is certainly sounds kind of scratchy. There will be no bunny hug or turkey trot at the White House during the Wilson regime. The administration hopes to accomplish greater things than frenk dances.

It seems to be getting harder and harder for San Francisco to stay on the map. It is now resorting to a police investigation.

Taft and Bailey will help elevate the legal profession in the future. And there is no denying that the legal profession needs it.

Yes, the Panama canal may change the climate. It has already caused a chilliness between America and England.

It is perfectly safe to send eggs by parcel post, providing they are hard-boiled.

Mr. Goldstein says: "I suffered from rheumatism five years, it kept me from business and caused excruciating pain. My knees would become as stiff as steel. I tried many medicines without relief, then took Hood's Sarsaparilla, soon felt much better, and now consider myself entirely cured. I recommend Hood's." TWO DAMAGE SUITS AGAINST INTERURBAN

Mary Griffin .Wants $6,000 and Anthony I. Schmidt $5,000 in Personal Injury Cases Heading Day Calendar.

Two damage suits against the Rockford and Interurban company head the day calendar of jury cases which will be tried in the circuit court beginning Monday afternoon at two o'clock. In the first case Mary Griffin seeks to recover $6,000 for injuries said to have been suffered by her through the negligence of employees of an Interurban car on which she rode from Beloit to Janesville in October 1910. She claims that she was violently thrown to the ground while alighting from the car at the corner of South Franklin and Pleasant streets.

Anthony I. Schmidt of Beloit claims he was injured suffering a fractured arm and a bruised leg when alighting from the Interurban car at Liberty street, Beloit, on Nov. 17, 1911, and that his injuries were due to the negligence of the company's employees. He asks $5,000 damages.

Another damage case of similar character against the Beloit Traction company, is the third case on the day calendar. P. H. Kull of Beloit is suing for $500 damages to reimburse him for injuries received when he was violently ejected from a car of the defendant company on Oct. 30, 1912, by an employee of the company. The sole reason given in the complaint for such action on the part of the conductor was that the plaintiff had given fifty cents in payment of his fare.

FAIR REMOVAL BILLS HEARING WEDNESDAY

Coming Week Will Be a Busy One For Legislative Committee According to Schedule.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., March 1.—Another long list of assembly committee hearings was announced today. The state fair removal bills will be considered by the committee on agriculture on Wednesday. On the same day the committee will consider the Sawyer bill for the establishment of a state dairy exposition board and the holding of an annual exposition.

Education Bills.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the assembly committee on education will consider several bills relating to the qualification of third grade teachers. Several of the bills require that the applicant must have at least two years' high school education. On Wednesday the elections committee will consider several bills for holding the primary election earlier in the year.

Assemblyman Rosa of Beloit has a bill for holding the primary at the time of the spring and Assemblyman Allison of Durand has a measure providing for the holding of the primary the first Tuesday in June.

The authors of both bills argue that the September primary comes at a time when the farmers are busy and that as a consequence they do not go out to vote. At the same time the committee will hear arguments on the Don C. Hall bill for wiping out political parties and on the Frederick bill which provides that a person must be the resident of a ward for thirty days before he can cast a vote in that precinct.

Saloon Regulation.

Several Frederick bills regulating the saloon will be up for consideration before the committee on license and fees on Thursday. One measure prohibits the sale of liquor on Sunday by drug stores, except on a physician's order, and another would compel the closing of all saloons at midnight until 6 o'clock the following morning. The Johnson bill providing that only state banks shall be state depositories will be heard by the finance committee Wednesday afternoon.

The judiciary committee will hear further arguments on the Hedding boxing bill Tuesday afternoon. The Holmes bill for compensating persons who have been sent to prison and the Hedding bill for pensioning circuit and supreme court judges who have served on the bench over twenty years will be heard the same day.

The Spoon bill for the regulation of commission merchants comes up on Tuesday for hearing before the state affairs committee and on Wednesday several measures limiting the speed of automobiles will be considered.

The transportation committee will hear all of the telephone bills on Wednesday and Thursday.

Other Measures.

With the idea of improving saloons in the state, Assemblyman Julius Engelbrecht of La. Follette county has introduced a measure providing that any person convicted of selling liquor to a minor within ten years shall not be permitted to hold a saloon license. The bill is made mandatory and provides that after 1913 no license to sell liquor shall be granted to any person whose conviction has been made by a justice of the peace.

A measure of interest to delinquent taxpayers of the state is introduced by Assemblyman C. J. Stemper of Milwaukee. It provides that taxes not paid by Feb. 1 each year shall be subject to a penalty of two percent of the amount of the tax, which shall be paid into the county treasury with the amount of the taxes.

There has been so much complaint in some localities about the freedom allowed persons sent to jail that Assemblyman Douglas Anderson has introduced a bill providing that any person sentenced to jail who shall be in charge of a jail who shall allow any person sentenced freedom other than prescribed by statute shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail no less than thirty days or more than sixty days and in addition to such punishment shall be removed from office.

RECEIVING PRICES ON OIL SPRINKLER

Contract to furnish the city of Janesville with an oil distributor will probably be let at the next meeting of the city council. Bids have been received to date from the Soudabaker Company of South Bend, Indiana, and Etnyre & Company. The Good Roads Machinery Company has made the city a price, though not a formal bid, and a bid is also expected from the Austin Western Company.

The distributors are of several different types. Some feed the oil to the nozzles by gravity, others by pressure. Others again, are equipped with devices for heating heavy oil so that it will flow readily. The nozzles are also of various designs, some distributing the oil in a spray and others in a fine film.

The city is receiving bids on different grades of asphalt oil in quantities of 75,000, 100,000 and 125,000 gallons. Five companies have submitted bids; they are the Standard Oil Company, Petroleum Products Company, United States Asphalt Refining Company, Indian Refining Company and Barber Asphalt Paving Company. Bids are also expected from other countries. Those of the eastern firms are generally higher than those of western companies because of the heavy freight charges.

At the annual spelling contest, which was held the past week at the Janesville Business College, the prize winners were: Fannie Litts of this city, first, receiving a solid silver spoon; Esther Nicolson of Ft. It was necessary to hold a special contest to decide the winner of third place, as two others were tied with the winner in the final, Lura Wetsphal of Ft. Atkinson and Leslie Winters of Koshkonong. Thirty-four students qualified for the final contest.

The hundred words given in the final were as follows: Business, chattels, reality, necessary, secretary, jewelry, stripped, pamphlet, assistant canvass, certain, nickel, compel, preferred, ninety, military, tobacco, restaurant, forty, hardware, vanilla, critical, separate, auction, salable, beginning, judgment, possible, practical, surely, scissors, alspice, genuine, interest, sacrifice, straight, raisin, thorough, embarrass, whether, succeed, possess, receipt, bureau, engineer, scarce, expense, excellent, recommend, cement, mortgage, changeable, license, wringer, obliged, cashier, mutilage, hoping, accommodate, maintain, calendar, disappoint, envelope, rhubarb, proceed, receive, privilege, molasses, accord, necessity, hosiery, granary, guitar, dandelion, docile, icicle, kernel, lodgment, mortar, macaroni, occurring, occasion, parallel, tenant, twelfth, almanac, abscess, curable, grammar, guinea, baptize, bicycle, clanders, collar, descend, professor, vinegar, pavilion, scodee, spittoon.

WISCONSIN FOREIGN POPULACE MINORITY

NATIVE BORN NOW PREDOMINATE, HAVING SIXTY PER CENT OF TOTAL.

LOSS FROM COUNTRY

Census Figures Reveal Significant Truths Concerning Economic Status of the State.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, March 1.—The Census Bureau has just issued a bulletin showing distribution of native population throughout the United States. It exhibits some exceedingly interesting facts as to the racial development of the country. One striking fact is that the resident of Wisconsin is that 22 per cent of our population were foreign born in 1910. The foreign population of Massachusetts was 31.5 per cent and of Rhode Island 33, while but two states in New England, Maine and Vermont, showed a smaller percentage of foreigners than Wisconsin. The bulletin shows also that of the 2,333,860 people in this state, in 1910, 77.8 per cent were native born and 66.8 were born in Wisconsin. Plainly the time has gone by to call Wisconsin a foreign state. It will also be worthy of the notice of those who are promoting the sale of Wisconsin lands, to know that Wisconsin had, in 1910, about 250,000 natives of other states and had furnished population from her own native born citizens to other states to the number of over 500,000. Investigation of the Census will show plainly that a majority of this exodus has been from the rural counties, for our cities have all been gaining. In view of the fact that our politicians have been catering so industriously to the farming element in the state, these figures are quite staggering. This is one of the most practical and serious criticisms that could be made upon our recent political and fiscal policy.

In line with the above discussion of census data an interesting article in last week's Harper's analyzes occupations of the people in New York city. Without going into the matter deeply it says that there are 14,000 groceries and delicatessen stores, about 7,000, butcher shops, and 7,500 small variety stores. "These three alone mean one merchant with at least two clerks to every 35 families," in New York city, and the writer adds "You will find a staggering number of New Yorkers doing nothing more than making the purchase and delivery of goods quick and convenient. All New York city thrives in manufacturing, its greatest productive business element are less than 700,000 operatives, which is less than one seventh of her inhabitants. Such figures as this would seem to be very significant in confirmation of the idea that the high cost of living is due mainly to the multifarious kinds of service which people now demand. Notwithstanding this showing, I take no stock in the college lecturers who tell women and others that modern life leaves them nothing to do. There is plenty to do, but it is neglected by those who should do it, for the opportunity to go about talking and telling other people what to do. I know of no better illustration of the assertion that machines supplant human effort than the type setting machine. I have heard old printers bewail the prospect of the typesetting machine by the hour. It was going to put 75 per cent of the printers out of business, because two machines could set an ordinary news paper. The result has been that most of them now employ more machines than they used to hand compositors in size and number almost a hundredfold.

The report from Washington that Senator LaFollette has his reward for not openly fighting Taft last year, in being accepted as a member of the Senate "Steering Committee," and in claiming as a "regular," finds new confirmation constantly. The most significant announcement recently has been that the valuation of railroads is to be passed and signed by President Taft. Listen to this paragraph from the Wall Street Journal of last Wednesday:

"In his revision of the House bill for the valuation of the property of all common carriers by the Interstate Commerce Commission, Senator LaFollette reveals the fact that he is more progressive than a Progressive, and perhaps more a statesman than either, despite all the tense noise he has made in Washington over the congenial wickedness of capital—in New York. The text of the bill as it comes from his hands reveals clearly, too, that he is aware of the several cases pending in the Supreme Court, notably the Minnesota rate cases, in which the principles that must govern the valuation of public utilities for rate-making purposes are about to be laid down. The measure, which has excellent prospects of hearing President Taft's signature, does not anticipate the country's highest court by attempting to decide whether the owners of the railroads are entitled to earn a return on "original cost," or some measure of present value."

In a recently published letter upon the subject of taxation Mr. E. M. Wing, vice president of the National National Bank of La Crosse, makes a statement that is worthy of attention for it illustrates a style of defense of existing tax making which is very disconcerting to say the least. Mr. Wing says that "the railroads pay twice the taxes they paid in 1900," as if that in itself was a virtuous achievement, while "The individual taxpayer in the city of La Crosse pays for state tax 60 cents on each thousand of assessment where in 1900 he paid $1.00." Let us see how this works out. In 1900 the total local assessment of La Crosse was $2,841,343. Today it is upwards of $22,000,000, an increase of $19,000,000 in round figures, or an increase of nearly 80 per cent. In 1900 the tax rate of La Crosse was .0225 mills the limit, under its charter. Now it is, I believe, 21 mills. So against an increase of 80 per cent in assessment, the rate has decreased about 7 per cent. Let us see how this works out. On the assessment of 1900, the city raised $291,180. On the present assessment it will raise $433,000, speaking in round figures, and would have to raise more but for the bountiful remission of states taxes, last fall, for campaign purposes. Go back and look up the budget and the sinking fund, and the figures will look still worse. Wisconsin's population has increased less than 13 per cent within this period, and the wealth of the country about 10 per cent. Is La Crosse exceeding the speed limit in wealth and population so she can afford these luxuries of costly government. The question applies equally to most other Wisconsin cities.

An Advertisement for Erie. The Wall Street Journal of the 29th contains the Erie Railroad's statement for January. It starts out, "The Erie Railroad is doing the heaviest business in its history." January revenues increased over $600,000 as compared with a year ago. The statement says:

"A ten-year course in economy has taught the Erie's present management a good many things, of which the most striking is how to reduce carrying costs below what has been considered the irreducible minimum. In the six months ended December 31 last, the Pennsylvania Railroad, carrying costs represented 34.5 per cent of gross, the New York Central's 34.6 per cent, and the Baltimore and Ohio's 34.6 per cent. The Erie's carrying costs were 33.6 per cent of gross. The University of Wisconsin is, owing to the fact that there are five or six different splits in Wisconsin "progressive" politics, coming in for some sharp criticism at Madison this winter. The University, whether justly or unjustly, is not important to those who are recognized by its friends and foes alike, if it is a permissible term, as engaged in political propaganda. However great, or inglorious, its purposes or achievements may be it is bound in the end, some day, to suffer the fate of any man or institution that fights political battles, and suffer defeat and humiliation. There is without any question, a most unfortunate, and equally unnecessary obtrusiveness of the university into everybody's business in these days, or people are disposed to think there is, a mean double edged sword is a pit to have short sighted policy provoke hostility. Perhaps the university may not be all-wise, even if it is considered all-powerful.

Short Notes. There is a probability that the Perry celebration, next August, will bring the largest fleet of vessels into Milwaukee harbor, ever seen together upon the lakes. There are 30 or more United States vessels to be here, and the annual regatta of the Lake Michigan Yacht Club will bring 75 or more sailing craft and this will be attraction enough to draw a lot of private steam yachts here to look on. There is talk of a sham battle between land and water forces, which would be most imposing and effective, if it can be arranged which seems likely.

The Housewife's League have got into hot collision with Milwaukee Retail Market Men. The former says Milwaukee pays the highest prices for meat in comparison with other cities. The butchers say the women don't know what they are talking about, which sounds "treasonous" these days. Few people seem to "The Quaker Girl," with 100 people, headed by Victor Morley, and Natalie Alt, is to sing to Milwaukee, at the Davidson beginning tomorrow night. Sunday night for a "Quaker" entertainment sounds a bit jarring to my New England conscience, but I am told it is not only demure but as pretty an operetta as you could see and hear even in Philadelphia. She may be the famous "Lady from Philadelphia," for all I know.

How to Escape the Bad Effects of March Weather

MRS. CHARLES ANSPAUGH.

March is the critical month of the whole year. It is the month of ill health and blizzards. February, with its epidemics of grip and outbreaks of colds, which have sown the seeds of disease and derangements broadcast. March is a month of untoward weather, but is the month that reaps the consequences of February derangements. If one succeeds in getting through with the month of March even tolerably well, the rest of the year will be comparatively easy. Every household ought to be provided with Peruna. If you have had grip during the winter and have not recovered your former health and strength you surely need Peruna. Peruna restores the appetite. Peruna increases the digestive powers. Peruna regulates the bowels. Peruna strengthens the nerve centers. Peruna does all these things, and without any untoward results. No family should allow themselves to be without Peruna during the month of March.

The symptoms of grip are: "First, begining with a cold not due to exposure. Second, a number of people attacked at same time. Third, confined chiefly to head and respiratory organs. Fourth, accompanied by high fever for several days. Fifth, serious after effects. Convalescence slow.

The experience of the people that Peruna is a remedy for grip have been uniformly good. Very few if any have been disappointed in Peruna as a grip remedy.

Mr. C. O. Peterson, of No. 3327 N. Hamilton Ave., Chicago, Illinois, had a severe attack of the grip which left him very weak. He was in a condition that he was unable to do any work. He began to take Peruna and in two weeks was strong and well. The consequence is he always keeps Peruna in his home.

Mr. George E. Pratt, No. 828 13th St., Moline, Illinois, writes concerning his wife: "She had had the grip. After using two bottles of Peruna she was greatly relieved. So much so that she continued the treatment for a short time, when she was thoroughly cured. After noting the effect that Peruna had in the case of his wife Mr. Pratt took the medicine himself for the grip. Not, however, until after he had taken several other remedies without any improvement. The Peruna completely cured him."

Mr. C. J. Powers, No. 1631 Williams St., Denver, Colorado, says that the grip had left him very weak. He took Peruna and at once he began to gain strength and was finally cured. Since then when I do not feel well or have taken a cold I always take Peruna and it never disappoints me in its action.

Thus we might go on indefinitely to recite cases where people have suffered from the after effects of grip. Then they have resorted to this remedy or that remedy. Finally they have been constrained to take Peruna. The result is always favorable.

If the people generally understood the benefit of Peruna no household would be without it during the month of March especially, when climatic diseases prevail so extensively.

Mrs. Charles Anspaugh, R. F. D. 1, Kimmell, Indiana, whose portrait is given above, writes: "Peruna has been a godsend to me. I can feel safe in saying that it saved my life, as I was all run down and was just miserable when I commenced taking your Peruna, but am on the road to recovery now. I cannot thank you too much."

WAR ALARMS DISTURB THE RUSSIAN BORDER

Complications With Austria-Hungary Lead to Numerous Rumors of Spying and Attacks.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Vienna, March 1.—News has come here from St. Petersburg and Russian towns along the Austrian border showing that Russian newspaper readers are daily perturbed by war alarms, due to the critical situation in the Balkans and the difficulties in Austro-Russian relations. Many Russian papers are serving the people's daily with alarming reports from towns along the Austrian frontier. Mysterious acropics and alivishs, always equipped with a high-power searchlight, have a habit of appearing nightly, turning their searchlights upon the city halls, railroad stations and other buildings and then disappearing in the direction of Austria or Roumania. Or a band of Austrian or German emissaries will visit the cabin of a railway section hand, blind and gag him and then make an elaborate survey of the bridges and culverts in his section, presumably to see if they will bear the weight of Austrian rolling stock.

Sometimes the reports have more substantial foundation, as in a case just reported in an order of the day by the commander of the Russian frontier guard. A scout on the frontier noted a group of Austria gendarmes at some mysterious work in a little cove on their side of the boundary. Investigation showed that they had managed to tap the Russian military telephone line at a point near the border. The case was reported to the Russian emperor and the intelligent scout received the imperial thanks and a substantial gift of money.

Another verification of the Austro-Russian tension is furnished by the removal of the highly venerated miraculous image of the Virgin from the Russian monastery at Pochaiev to a place of security at Zhitomir.

Pochaiev is only five miles from the Austrian border. By a standing order, dating from the time of Nicholas I, the monks are required, in case of danger on the western frontier, to remove the image to Zhitomir, and in more serious cases to Kursk. During the present crisis the monks applied to the Holy Synod at St. Petersburg for instructions and the removal of the image was ordered. It took place with great solemnity, the image being borne in solemn procession, followed by hundreds of peasants, to the nearest railroad station, and thence by special train to Zhitomir, where it was welcomed by the commander of the troops of the Kiev military district, General Adjutant Ivanoff, the governor of the province, the archbishop at the head of the clergy and all the soldiers of the garrison.

The recent discussion and general opposition in Austria to coeducation in the schools and colleges of the dual monarchy has brought comparison to the working of this system of instruction in Russia.

Khorov, a town near Kiev carries the banner for severe ordinances. Here, as in many provincial towns, boy pupils have been forbidden to go walking with the girl student in the town streets, but the Khorov board of education followed this ordinance up with an order prohibiting the teachers also to be seen on the streets in company with women, on the ground that they should furnish an example of proper conduct on their pupils. A high school party held in Khorov during the holidays the school authorities at midnight segregated the boy pupils in a locked room, dismissed the girls unescorted, and released the young men only when time enough had elapsed for the young women to reach their homes.

The Real Villain. "Are you the villain of this troupe?" asked the baggageman who was handling theatrical trunks. "No," replied the youth with black, curly hair. "I used to be, but the real villain is the treasurer of the company, and by this time he must be about five hundred miles on his way to somewhere west."

A STORY OF "OLD ABE," WISCONSIN WAR EAGLE

Major Dawes, who commanded a company of the 8th Wisconsin, was interviewed by a reporter of The Milwaukee Republican and gave the following facts about Old Abe, the bald eagle that went through the war with that regiment. According to an account appearing in the Madison Democrat:

"Old Abe," said the officer, "was well known all over the world. His reputation is as widespread as that of any general who fought in the same battles with him. My first acquaintance with him was in the spring of 1861, twenty years ago, now. The 8th Wisconsin regiment, a company of which I had the honor to command, was going into camp at camp Randall, in Madison, and with one of the companies, that commanded by Capt. Perkins, came this eagle, then a chicken about half or two thirds grown.

"Whether the idea had been formed before he came into camp of making him part of the regiment for the war, or whether it was developed afterward, I do not now recollect, but it was understood before we left camp that the bird was enlisted, and he was christened Old Abe, and one of the tallest men in the regiment detailed to carry, and take care of him, with the understanding that at the end of the war he was to convey him to Washington and present him to his namesake, the president. A standard with a slanting platform on it, over which was carved quiver and arrows for him to stand upon, was obtained and upon this he made his way, when on the march. A cord was attached to his leg, secured him to his standard, and standing on his perch over the shoulder of his bearer, and near the colors of the regiment, he was the observed of all observers.

"Did he ever get away from the regiment?"

"Yes, several times, but never for long. The most noted was at the battle of Corinth. General Mower's horse was shot under him. I lost one-third of all the men I had, either killed or wounded, was shot myself, and a bullet cut Old Abe's cord, all in a moment of time. The rebels were down on us and with a whoop and yell, I saw an eagle soaring—that is pretty classical word to use—but it alone can express the dignity of the flight away over the rebel lines and supposed he was gone for keeps, as did we all, and sorry enough we were. We were in trouble enough; licked for the time being—our friends killed and wounded. The old Joe horse shot (and we all liked the fellow on his master's account), and above all our eagle was gone over to the rebels. Some of my men gathered me up in a blanket and took me along the best they could, and we had not gone far before Old Abe came swooping back to his perch, which was being brought along, for we did not mean to let the Johnnies crow over that anyhow. This sounds almost too poetical to be believed, yet there were too many eye-witnesses to it to be successfully contradicted. I know these things of my own knowledge and assert them to be true."

"How do you account for the eagle knowing the regiment, and where to find the place?"

"I don't account for it. All I have to do is to state facts. If you want reasons and causes you must go to some philosopher. I believe the eagle knew our regiment as well as we knew it ourselves, and that he could tell it as far off as any of us. When soldiers from other regiments visited us and called on him, as they usually did, he did not appear the same before them as any member of the 8th that happened to be near him. It was a common understanding among the boys that Old Abe knew who belonged to his regiment and who did not, even if they were soldiers of other regiments. This was not a peculiarity of the eagle alone. The colonel had a dog with us that evidently knew the personnel of the regiment entirely—better, perhaps, than any man belonging to it I am not superstitious, but I fully believe that bird could think."

"What did he used to live on in the field?"

"Rebel chickens seemed to agree with his constitution remarkably well. He never suffered for want of food, and when the rest of us sometimes did, I have seen the whole regiment on chase after a rabbit across the field after a hard day's march, whooping like fiends, for his supper. Of course it was fun, but its being for the eagle helped the fun wonderfully."

"Where was he usually during an engagement?"

"Always in the thickest of the fight near the colors, usually on the ground occasionally flying to his perch and screaming terrifically. He seemed to know that business was being transacted and the nature of it. He would stand on a canon that was being served with the greatest rapidity, without flinching, and the rattle of small arms seemed to delight him. Of course he did not know what it was to be hurt by the balls, but I believe he appreciated that trouble came to those about him by their means."

"Major, you are enthusiastic about the eagle."

"The army were one and all enthusiastic about him. He was a bird only, but he was the embodiment of principle, a companion of our service, which is a good deal, in a word. And there will be indeed many wet eyes when the news of his death reaches the survivors of the 8th regiment. I have about as much dignity as people generally have, yet I would not feel it was in the least compromised by my acting as pall-bearer at his funeral, should he be buried."

REPUTATION AS WAG AN EMBARRASSMENT FOR SIR FREDERICK

Unionist Member From London in House of Commons Studiously
Avoiding the Suffragists.

(By Associated Press.)

London, March 1.—Sir Frederick George Banbury, member of the house of commons for the city of London, has a reputation as a wag that today is proving embarrassing to a measurable degree. The suffragists are so eager to reach him that they would readily cease all their heckling of cabinet ministers if they could only find Sir Frederick, but the member for the city of London is in seclusion, and he will not trust even his colleagues in the house with a knowledge of his whereabouts. In the meantime the women pursue the speaker and the cabinet members to their extreme discomfort, and Sir Frederick continues in hiding.

Sir Frederick made the discovery that to introduce a clause into the franchise reform bill, giving the votes to women, would make it necessary for the speaker of the house to rule the bill out of order as going further than was contemplated when it passed its second reading. He did this, and consequently the suffragists lost the opportunity of testing the feeling of the house on the question of women voting. Their anger against Sir Frederick rose in proportion as the realization of their defeat sank home, but by the time they began to look for Sir Frederick he was gone. So they turned their attention to the members of the cabinet who, compared to the member for the city of London, are quite innocent of responsibility for the defeat of their plans.

Sir Frederick Banbury has the reputation of being the most successful humorist in the house of commons. Among other things, he moved last year the amendment and arranged the trap, which resulted in the temporary defeat of the government on the financial proposals of the home rule bill. He made the discovery that the speaker would have to act against a vote for women clause in the franchise reform bill while hunting up evidence against the bill. He felt the measure was unfair to the city of London in that it provided that voters must cast their ballots in the constituency in which they reside. Therefore he decided to oppose it, and began his search for evidence. He found also that as few of the property owners or business men in the city reside within the "square mile," the members would, had the bill been passed, simply represent the porters and charwomen of the office buildings and banks.

Sir Frederick is a retired stock broker. Until recent months he was chiefly known for his cheery speeches on all manner of subjects, but never on any very important question. In the last days of a session of the house of commons Fridays are given up to private members' business. By draw it is decided what member shall have a Friday to himself and on that day he introduces some not measure for himself or his party. The measure must be passed before five o'clock or disappear. There were field days for Sir Frederick. No matter what the subject, he could talk for hours on it, talk it out in fact, so that there was no possible chance of concluding the debate by the stipulated time. He was seldom known to favor any measure introduced on a Friday by a private member.

Another favorite pastime of his was after attacking the government fiercely, to cross the house and take a seat on the front bench reserved for cabinet ministers. Although these benches are reserved for ministers merely through courtesy, private members never sit there, unless invited. Sir Frederick, however, found that by some old act of parliament members for the city of London have the privilege, and on certain occasions he takes pleasure in exercising it.

Alexandria, Egypt, which has attained notoriety recently on account of revelations of municipal graft, has submitted to the government a coat of arms which has been subjected to much criticism by patriotic Egyptians. The most prominent figure in the design is a scantily clad Roman maiden floating on a raft toward the moon. The meaning of the design has not been explained by the city fathers, and the people are left wondering why a Roman and not an Egyptian maiden should have been chosen for the chief figure.

Londoner has a reputation for tackling any problem presented to him, but he has refused to play Solomon in the present dispute, and has referred the matter to the College of Heralds in London. These experts may be able to shed some light upon the reasons for making the Roman maiden symbolical of the city which is now Egypt's commercial center, and which was once the intellectual hub of the world. If they cannot unravel the puzzle they will be asked to submit a design of their own which will typify more simply the history of Alexandria. Some of the opponents of the present design have suggested designs embracing a burnt library to symbolize the past and a cotton pod for the future.

A good deal of sentiment and not a few sobriquets have recently been showered on a "Scottish piper," who appeared outside Hampton House, the town residence of the Duke of Abercorn, on the night of the late Duke's death, and played "Lament." It was announced in every London paper the next morning that the act was spontaneous on the part of an old servant of the family and the new duke sent scouts out to discover the "faithful retainer." He was found at right living in a court off Holborn, and taken to the duke, who bestowed upon him a handsome sum of money.

Since then the "Lament" has been played outside the residence of almost every family of means or title in London having the slightest connection with Scotland which had suffered bereavement. It was being repeated at the doors of the late Duke of Crawford a few nights ago when the police came upon the scene and took a hand in the game. The piper they discovered was a street musician and not a genuine Scotch piper. Street musicians in London are allowed to play only during certain hours, and then only on streets where the residents do not object to their music.

Roland Harvey, secretary of the American legation at Santiago, Chile, while in London this week on his way home, declared that no country is looking forward with greater anticipation to the opening of the Panama canal than Chile. The shifting of trade routes which will follow the opening of the canal is being seriously considered by shipping and kindred business interests, and plans are already being made in Chile for direct steamship service to New York via the canal.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

PETER SCHOFIELD.

About Ben Adhem—may his tribe increase!—
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich and like a lilj in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold.
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised
His head, and, with a look made of all sweet accord, Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."

"And is mine one?" said About. "Nay," Replied the angel. About spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, "I pray thee,
then,
Write me, as one that loves his fellow men."

The angel wrote and vanished. The next night
It came again, with a great wakening
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed—
And, lo, Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

—Leigh Hunt.

I have found one of the tribe of About Ben Adhem. He is a Kansas farmer. His name is Peter Schofield.
This winter a stock plague raged in Peter's neighborhood. It was said to be the worst disaster in that part of the state since the grasshopper scourge.
Some of the farmers lost all their horses and were too poor to buy others.
One morning was found tucked on the door of the schoolhouse near Peter Schofield's home this notice signed by his name:

The Lord has spared my stock. My horses have gone through the epidemic without loss, and I have twenty head to loan to my less fortunate neighbors without charge for plowing. Those who need are welcome to them.

A simple thing, you say. Yes; that is the beauty of it. Just a simple act of kindness, but the kingdom of heaven is made up of such.

If Peter Schofield had been of the same kidney as some of the modern trusts he would have taken advantage of his monopoly on horses and have charged about three prices in hiring them out to his neighbors.

If he had been of the breed of those who play to the grand stand and hire a press agent to exploit their virtues he would have sent the notice to all the newspapers, accompanied by his picture and a sketch of his life.

He did neither. It was quite by accident that the newspapers learned of the incident.

Remember this when you make up your list of those who love the Lord, and do not forget Peter Schofield.
But write him down, like About Ben Adhem, as one who loved his fellow men.

Tale of a Horse.
"Why," said the man from Florida, who was regaling his auditors with tall tales of the wonders of his native state, "just to show you how everything develops down there, a hair fell from the tail of a horse down there one day and fell into a stream of water. This was in the early summer.
It grew into a snake, then into a bigger snake, and kept on growing until one day late in August it swallowed the horse that originally had shed it!"

Took Practical Meaning.
"What does it mean to cast your bread upon the waters?" asked the Sunday school teacher. "It means that the fishes has to be fed," replied small Sadie.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.
Observations taken at 8 a. m., 75th meridian time. Air pressure reduced to sea level. Isohyets (continuous lines) pass through points of equal air pressure. Isotherms (dotted lines) pass through points of equal temperature, drawn only for zero, freezing, 95°, and 100°. Isohyets (continuous lines) pass through points of equal precipitation. Arrows show the direction of the wind. First figures, lowest temperature past 12 hours; second, precipitation of .01 inch or more for past 24 hours; third, maximum wind velocity.

The barometer is low in the Appalachian Mountain region, and a small but intense center of low barometer has developed in the Northwest. Light precipitation in the East, and on the northern plains attend these disturbances. The one in the Northwest is also accompanied by gales, Sioux City reporting 52 miles an hour, Pierre, S. D., 42, and Bismark, 40. An area of high barometer in western Canada is attended by extremely low temperatures for the season, 30 degrees below in Alberta, 15 degrees below in northern North Dakota. The barometer is high, and the weather fair in the Southwest.

Dog Meat in Germany.
The use of the flesh of dogs as a food for man is becoming common in Germany, even in the capital, Berlin. From necessity the German working-man has long made horse meat a substantial portion of his daily fare, but while Saxony consumes thousands of dogs annually the practice of eating this meat has not until recently invaded Prussia.

Another Grievance.
"There's a difference in time, you know, between this country and Europe," said a man in New York to a newly arrived Irishman. "For instance, your friends in Cork are in bed and fast asleep by this time, while we are enjoying ourselves in the early evening." "That's always the way," exclaimed Pat. "Ireland never got justice yet!"—New York Telegraph.

He Can't See.
Many a man thinks he knows it all in spite of the fact that he is constantly proving that he doesn't.

Her Peculiar Request.
Phoebe, three years old, wanted her mamma in church to fan her, but could not think how to express it, so she said, "Mamma, wind me."

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edgerton, March 1.—Members of the Men's club of the Congregational church were entertained at a wild goose dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Peters on Friday evening. The Peters home was attractively decorated for the event. The tables were decked with bouquets of carnations and sixty-two guests were served with a delicious repast.

Following the dinner the evening's program was taken up on the subject: "Advertisements that Misrepresent: Resolved, That 'A Law Prohibiting the Same Would Be Beneficial to the Farmer.'" by B. L. Page.

"The Local Lawyer," G. W. Blanchard.

"The Local Banker," L. A. Anderson.

All were present to take their part, except Mr. Page, who was ill. Mr.

Gettle, who came from Madison to be present for this occasion, kindly consented to take Mr. Page's topic. After the program was concluded a general discussion on the subject followed. To the great delight of all present Rev. F. W. Schoenfeld related some of the experiences of a wild goose chase, and in behalf of the members of the Men's club of the Congregational church and others present, thanked Mr. and Mrs. Peters for their splendid hospitality. It was an occasion which will linger long in the minds of those present. Andrew Jensen, who has lived in Edgerton for forty years, said that he had never been at a gathering which he had enjoyed quite as much as this. Professor Ringo, president of Albion college, was also present and delivered a splendid address. Mr. Pierce and son, who live near Lake Koshkonong, drove in from the country to be present and enjoy the goose dinner. The guests are under obligation to them as they were very considerate in helping Mr. Peters shoot the geese. After a late hour all departed.

Rev. F. W. Schoenfeld will fill the pulpit of the Congregational church, Sunday, March 2. The morning theme will be: "A Scholar's Homage Concerning Christ." The evening sermon, "The man he might have been." Visitors at the Carlton, Friday: H. L. Clarke, Madison; M. G. Burns, Milwaukee; T. J. Sexton, Madison; H. D. Kimball, Madison; A. The Edgerton K. P. lodge No. 146, held their private dancing party in Academy hall last evening and about thirty-five couples were present. Music was furnished by the home orchestra. Dancing was carried on from nine till one.

Parcel Post
HOW TO USE IT.
(The new parcel post law includes some perplexing provisions. The Gazette is from day to day presenting a concise explanation of some of the more important sections of the law.)

A mailable parcel, on which postage is fully prepaid, may be insured against loss in an amount equivalent to its actual value, but not to exceed $50.00 on payment of a fee of 10 cents in parcel post stamps, such stamps to be affixed to the package. When a parcel is insured the sender will receive a receipt showing the office and date of mailing and number of parcel.

The Gazette Parcel Post Map gives the zone limits, rates and all the provisions of the law. It is a good Geographical map of the United States and for a quick comprehension of the parcel post law is invaluable. QUEEN ALEXANDRINE SETS GOOD EXAMPLE

Queen Alexandrine of Denmark is setting an example to her people in the way she shows the importance she places on the education of her two sons, Crown Prince Frederick, 14, and Prince Knud, 12. While many school boys were still enjoying their recent holiday vacation the two little princes were putting in six hours a day at their studies.

FAVOR A SUBSTITUTE FOR THE ROETHE BILL

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., March 1.—It is understood that the assembly committee on education will probably report favorably on a bill to be offered by Assemblyman J. D. Miller, chairman of the committee, as a substitute for the Roethe bill for publicity of meetings of the university regents. His bill would allow the board to hold executive sessions on matters involving personal business the publication of which would vitiate its successful consummation or cause injury to innocent persons. Other sessions would be open to the public. This plan is expected to have the approval of President Van Hise, who told the committee Wednesday that he had no objection to such a modification.

Ancient Definitions of Beauty.

He used to say that personal beauty was a better introduction than any letter; but others say that it was Diogenes who gave this description of it, while Aristotle called beauty "the gift of God," that Socrates called it "a short-lived tyranny," Theophrastus, "a silent deceit," Theocritus "an ivory mischief," Carneades, "a sovereignty which stood in need of no guards,"—Diogenes Laertius, A. D. 200.

Time and again an auction advertisement in The Gazette has brought buyers twenty, thirty and in some cases fifty miles.

When you advertise in The Gazette your auction crowd will be full of men you don't know and never saw before.

The War of The "40's"

THE FIERCEST FIGHT IN MOTORDOM

PRICES CUT IN TWO

Five years ago, the standard price for 40-horsepower cars, equipped, was around $3,000. And they were not equipped as now.

Some of the very cars which now sell around $1,600 sold then at $3,500 and up.

Another fact is that the finest cars, and the best equipped, are now in the Forties class.

This is a startling revolution, and you who buy cars ought to know how it came about.

The Trend to Forties

First came a trend among motor-car buyers to 40-horsepower cars. The demand for this type has now become overwhelming.

Men who started with small cars came to want something larger. They wanted more comfort more appearance, more room. And they found, above all, that they needed more power.

Men who bought heavy cars—over-powered and over-priced—came to want something more economical.

So all classes of buyers, by the tens of thousands, came to choosing Forties. And motor-car makers awoke to the fact that a Forty of some make was soon bound to be the leading American car.

Then 72 Makers Started

Then maker after maker began to make Forties. Hundreds of the ablest engineers gave their whole time to Forties. Now there are 72 factories turning out cars close to 40 horsepower.

Among these makers there developed a rivalry such as never before was known. Cars of this class were built better and better. Then makers equipped them as no other cars are equipped.

Yet, with all these improvements, prices dropped and dropped, because of the fierceness of this fight.

Now, with 72 makers competing, you can get a Forty, splendidly equipped, for what stripped Thirties sold for but a short time back. And you can get more for your money in a Forty today than in any other type of car.

It is up to you to get the advantage.

The Michigan "40" Four Years to Get Ready

Four years ago we saw this fight coming, and we started out then to get ready.

In those four years we have sent out 5,000 cars, and watched every car's performance. We have made in four years 300 improvements.

We brought to our plant some of the ablest men in the business, and gave them time to do their level best. We built up here a model plant of enormous capacity, so making cost was cut to the minimum.

Now we have a car in the Michigan "40" which no maker ever excelled. We have equipped it better than any car in its class. And we have fixed for this season a record price of $1,585, equipped.

With this car we intend to win this fight of the Forties. We are bound to win out against every rival, with buyers who make comparisons. There's not a car in this class which, prices considered, even approaches the Michigan.

Cameron's Wonder Car

Our engineer-in-chief is W. H. Cameron, one of the oldest and greatest engineers in America. He is the only man who has ever built over 100,000 successful medium-priced cars.

Cameron has given his best to the Michigan "40." And Cameron's best means the best men know about building an automobile.

Our body designer is John A. Campbell, who has designed equipages for kings. The Michigan "40" has the finest body that Campbell ever built.

Every part and detail of this remarkable car is built by an expert selected by Cameron. And every vital part, for big margin of safety, has been made sufficient for a 60-horsepower car.

That car—electric lighted, over-tired, luxuriously equipped—is the car we offer at the record price of $1,585.

Come and Compare

Now we ask you to go to the Park Garage, the Michigan dealers named below, and see for yourself what the Michigan offers.

Compare its length with rival cars, its width of seat, its room. Compare its body design, its finish its trimmings. Compare the upholstery—hand-buffed leather filled with the best curled hair. Note that our cushions are 14 inches deep.

Compare the size of vital parts—the margins of safety—the power of the brakes. Note our four-forward-speed transmission like the costliest cars, where rivals use but three.

Compare the tires—the widest tires used on any Forty. In wide tires lies the secret of small tire upkeep.

Compare the equipment. The electric lights as an extra, for instance, would cost $125. Note what our price includes. Then compare the price.

Do this in justice to yourself. We have made such comparisons with all rival cars, and we know that nothing in Motordom offers nearly such value. Your verdict will agree with ours.

The Evening Chit-Chat

CURIOSITY A VIRTUE.

HERE are some virtues that are much more irritating than vices. And there are some so-called vices that are far more forgivable than certain virtues.

I am thinking especially of curiosity. Curiosity, I believe, is usually placed in the ranks of the vices. Perhaps I should be a bit milder and say that it is considered a failing. Now, to my mind, curiosity has at least one foot on the right side of the dividing line—possibly both.

It seems to me that curiosity is as necessary to the healthy mind as hunger is to the body. One must be hungry in order to eat in order to grow physically. One must be curious in order to seek information in order to grow mentally. Curiosity, the thirst for information and understanding, is behind all knowledge and all wisdom. Suppose Newton had not been curious and all why the apple fell. Suppose he had simply accepted the fact incuriously and eaten the apple, as most of us would have done. Then we should have had to wait for our laws of gravity until someone who knew enough to be curious about simple things appeared. Fortunately, Newton's mind hunger was keener than his body hunger.

A curious child is a child with a healthy mind. A child that never asks "Why?" will never amount to anything in the world. Of course, it is sometimes tiresome to try to give intelligent and helpful answers to children's questions. But imagine the mother who would rebel because her child had a healthy appetite and she had to spend so much time preparing food for him. And yet, answering a child's "Whys" is feeding his mind's appetite.

The curiosity which interests itself in our neighbors' concerns and borders on inquisitiveness is the variety most in dispute. Will I be thought impossible if I confess that I have a kind of feeling for that kind of curiosity? For myself, I like to listen to a good neighborhood gossip if her curiosity is friendly and not malicious. I like to know what my friends are saying and doing. I like to know where Mrs. M. the traveler of the neighborhood, is going to spend the winter; which among her numerous train my pretty little neighbor across the way likes best; and just how much money the neighborhood miser left when he finally had to relax his greedy grasp.

Yes, the cat is out of the bag now. I insist upon calling curiosity a virtue because I myself am one of the curious. Well, I am not ashamed of the fact for the motive. Who will defend us if we don't defend ourselves? I am curious, abominably so. I can never look down on a city and see the landscape "coming out in points of light" without thinking of the little group of hearts and interests clustered about each light. The bundles people carry fascinate me. I can never see a messenger boy carrying a nice long box that shouts out "roses" to all who have ears to hear without thinking about the someone who is going to be gladdened by that gift. I can never see two young lovers or old ones either, for that matter—without being interested in their romance and speculating on what they think of each other and how they say it.

Yes, I'm curious and I'm not ashamed of it. I have innumerable faults, but I refuse to call that one of them. Curiosity is one of my few virtues.

Tact Versus Truth

It seems to me, the woman was saying, "that a tactful person can't be truthful. When I hear it said of a woman that she has a lot of tact, I am extremely suspicious of her amount of truth. I fear it is a very small quantity."

Is it true that the tactful person can't be truthful, or is the woman confusing tactfulness with flattery?

Cannot a woman be diplomatic in what she says, without being untruthful? Can she not be tactfully silent, or to speak is to be unkind, critical, or untruthful?

Tact is lauded as a great possession, as a quality valuable to possess. But surely we neither laud nor admire the lack of truth.

Is not the tactful person the one who skillfully skirts around, or over, the thin ice of conversation, or conduct, when, to break through, would mean a sudden chill for all concerned; or else the one who puts an unpleasant thing so tactfully or gently that offense cannot be taken?

Is not the tactful person really animated by the desire to be kind or loving, or at least to avoid hurting the feelings of others; and so from pure kindness of heart, says or does the tactful thing that will avoid offense?

Surely this is vastly different from being untruthful, or grossly flattery. For gross flattery is often an untruth.

A woman who has the reputation of being tactful, was told by a business man that she must, before a certain amount of money owed her was due, notify the party who had to pay it.

It seemed to her rather an unusual proceeding, to tell a stranger he must be sure to pay his debts when they were due; for in her opinion, that was what the notification amounted to. And she felt he would have a perfect right to be offended, if she wrote him to this effect, since he had shown no disposition not to pay. But as her business friend was imperative in the matter, she decided to follow his advice.

Had she not been tactful, she might have written a short, blunt note to the effect that the money was due on the fifteenth, and she hoped he would be able to pay; and he might have been quite indignant. But being tactful, she wrote a clever, amusing little letter, and as a result, received a charming and courteous reply. And the money was paid promptly.

She did not in any way evade the truth in her letter. She simply made an effort to put it in a gracious and kindly form.

And that is usually, is it not, what the tactful person does? She tries to be kind, not to hurt nor wound, nor to touch the sore places.

If in doing this, there is danger of getting away from the truth, then one should be on guard. For it would be a pity to have so beautiful a trait as tact, spoiled by so unlovely a one as lack of truth.

candy kitchen has gradually developed until it is probably one of the most talked of in the city.

When we entered the door of Mary Elizabeth's we felt as though we had left the commercial world far behind and were in a place of ideals, where the heart, the hand and the head were all working together. Very pleasant blue frocked girls were in attendance and we were soon seated at one of the white tables. I was going to say ready to be served, but will have to confess the desire was greater to look about the room.

White, white everywhere. The effect was a whole of white walls and posts, white tables with white tops and the most exquisite cleanliness and the most harmonious color scheme that could be imagined. Dainty lunch cloths, china of most artistic shape and coloring and a few good pictures on the walls; all these give you an impression of wholesome beauty and artistic feeling immediately upon entering the door.

But we could not look about too long as the dainty waitress was courteously waiting for our order of tea, and I assure you that the tea was hot, of fine flavor, and all the remaining food lived up to the feeling of sincerity which impressed us as we opened the door. "I must know something of Mary Elizabeth," I said to my friend, so this is what I found out.

thinking as I heard it perhaps in many families there is some girl or boy with an idea who may just need a word of encouragement to start out and do things, in the simple but direct way she has done it and with it all keeping the same sweet charming manner as though she were inviting you to her tea table in her own home. Mary Elizabeth is the eldest child in a family of three sisters and a brother, who with the mother, make up a firm in which each member takes charge of that part of the work to which each seems best adapted. This daughter created her own enterprise at the age of fifteen, organized her own scheme of business methods and looks as though she was perfectly happy in devoting all the long joyous days of youth to the one vital object of her existence—making her candy business and tea shop a success. When a child she used to make candy at home to please the guests, and then family fortune was sweetened away and all realized something "must be done," and so she made her first pound of candies, put them into a box and wrote on it, "Mary Elizabeth's Home-Made Candy."

Six orders were taken from this one box, and that, they told me, was the real beginning of the candy kitchen, and so these people with their own strong ideals, accustomed to refinement, have truly made their little shop a delightful place. You seem to understand it at a glance that they are deeply in earnest, and you cannot stand face to face with people who are in earnest without giving a mental lightheadedness, without wishing them every success.

In the office there are multicolored windows and shelves full of interesting and progressive books. Back of this is the girls' luncheon and reading room and current magazines on a broad table and more cozy settles, and "the girls" sweep after luncheon and then this attractive spot becomes a reception and waiting room. Everything is as bright and clean and systematic in the kitchen as in the most enlightened and up-to-date home today. Indeed, there seemed to be an air of calm and cheerfulness and self-respect about this quaint business establishment of Mary Elizabeth's on busy Fifth avenue that many large and expensive homes lack entirely, and it is really their home, for they are there early and late.

This young lady lays no claim to artistic achievement and in utmost simplicity considers herself merely a sincere young woman of business and the friend of patrons and girl helpers. Every man and woman, boy or girl has something in them which they know they could do if they just had a chance to try. It need not be great, it need not be far from or out of the home. But find it and do it with all the steady purpose of Mary Elizabeth.

The Kitchen Cabinet

IT is like taking the sun out of the world to bereave human life of friendship, than which the mortal gods have given man nothing better, nothing more gladdening.—Cicero.

THE PLEBEIAN CABBAGE.

Cabbage, with onions, have gained an unenviable reputation because of their odoriferousness, but cabbage is a wholesome vegetable, and one which contains mineral salts which are needed in the blood.

One reason that we tire of certain vegetables is that they are served in so few ways; we grow to dislike them. If a change of serving could be often made, and a little more care to have a variety, these common vegetables would be more welcome on our tables.

Cabbage cooked with an onion, chopped and served in a white sauce is an unusual, but very good, way of serving that vegetable.

Stuffed Cabbage.—Cut out the stalk end of a firm head of cabbage, leaving the hollow shell. Tie the cabbage in a thin cloth and boil until tender, then, carefully remove the cloth and fill with seasoned stuffing of chopped meat, bread crumbs and seasoning; then bake in a hot oven until the cabbage is brown.

Hot Slaw.—Shred a head of cabbage, and pour over the following dressing: Beat two egg yolks, add two tablespoonsful of water, a tablespoonful of butter melted, a dash of salt and a quarter of a cup of vinegar. Cook this dressing over hot water and pour over the shredded cabbage while hot. Heat the cabbage and serve hot.

Cabbage Salad.—Cabbage shredded and a small quantity of celery, a bit of chopped onion added, then a boiled dressing of equal parts of eggs and vinegar cooked over hot water poured over it and seasoned well with salt and red pepper, makes a most desirable salad.

Poor Economy.

Charles M. Schwab, apropos of his superb work in aid of released convicts, said modestly in New York: "O, it is economy to help these men. Help them a little, and their lives, instead of being wasted, are of value to the nation."

To be bighearted and timid about helping such men is to be like the chap who was asked, the first of the year, to buy a calendar.

"This chap, after studying the calendar thoughtfully, handed it back with a frown.

"No, no," he said. "I can't afford it. I may be dead before the year is out."

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS
BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How can white spots be removed from finger nails? SUBSCRIBER.

These are caused by some injury to the nail, usually by poking a knife around under the skin at the edges. They cannot be removed—must disappear with the growth of the nail. Be more careful about the way you push the flesh back from the nail. Use an Orangewood stick; never any metal.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have catarrh and my doctor said the best thing for me to do is to go to California. I want to go there, but don't like to go alone. I am nineteen years old. Am I too young to go there alone? How much is the fare to California? For long does it take to get there? I would have to work for my living. Could I do that there? What is the best thing to do for catarrh? LONESOME GIRL.

It would probably do you good to go to a higher altitude, but you can get better right where you are if you will do the right things. You should be outdoors every possible moment and sleep in a room with two windows constantly open. In cold weather put on plenty of bedclothes and wear a nightcap. Dress warm when you go out in cold weather. Keep your room well ventilated day and night. Keep your feet warm. At least one hot bath a week, being careful not to catch cold after it. Eat a lot of nourishing food. Snuff salt water up your nose several times a day. Get a good doctor to tell you what to do—not one who wants to get rid of you as a patient.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

For Headache.

The juice of half a lemon squeezed in a cup of black coffee, without any sugar will help a sick headache.

To Shorten Hattings.

Hattings can be shortened at home by breaking off at desired length and sharpening on common whetstone.

Some thrifty person might do a good business by running a small emery wheel in a department store, and shortening hattings while you wait.

Things Worth Knowing.

When lace curtains have been worn too much for the windows, the bottoms will make good dresser covers with three finished edges. The sides may also be used if they are in good condition. Put slips of colored cambric or lawn under them. I also made a fine bedspread by sewing two together lengthwise, after trimming.

To Pare Onions—Open stove door and hold the onions before it. The draft will draw the strength away, so it will not smart the eyes. Have a fire in the stove.

When making curtains, make the hem the same width top and bottom without heading. The rod can be run in either hem, and the curtains will last longer.

To Clean Zinc On Cabinets Or Floors—Saturate cloth with kerosene and rub; all spots of grease or dirt will vanish and the surface will be clean and polished; especially good in cold weather, when they can't be washed successfully.

The Table.

Indian Pudding.—Two cups hot milk stir half cup cornmeal, then add half cup suet chopped fine half cup molasses, half cup seeded raisins one egg, half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon each of ginger and cinnamon. Turn into buttered baking dish and half cup cold water over the top.

Bake very slowly for three hours. Serve either plain or with cream and sugar or hard sauce.

Baked Apples.—Pare and core enough apples to cover bottom of a rather deep pan. Then pour over them the following dressing: One cup sugar, two heaping tablespoons flour; stir flour and sugar good, then put in large tablespoon of butter, then pour over this one pint boiling water, stir ring good. Bake until apples are done.

VACCINATION.

While expressing appreciation of "the excellent work we are doing" thru these hints, Dr. Charles E. Page, of Boston, expresses regret that we should endorse the practice of vaccination, which he regards as a "ghastly blunder." I did not intend to convey the impression that I favor vaccination as a routine practice. I think that vaccination against smallpox and the new method of vaccination against typhoid do prevent the development of those diseases. The production of an artificial immunity in imitation of the method of nature is a well established practice, supported by sound physiological theory, but this is not saying that the practice is on the whole beneficial. With all due respect to those who believe in the new practice of bacterial vaccination as well as that against smallpox, I believe that the minority of physicians who oppose the practice have most excellent ground for doing so.

Ask at railroad ticket office for fare to California and about time it takes to go there. You could probably find work to do there. You are rather young to travel about alone.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What is good for chapped hands? N. M. C. Dissolve a spoonful of trisulphate (which you can get from the druggist for a few cents) in three times as much water. Let it stand in cover cup 12 hours. Then fill cup with water and apply a little of it to the hands.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am cross-eyed in one eye and would like to know if there is any home treatment for it. Would it cost much to have an operation on my eye? HAZEL. There is no home treatment that I know of. An oculist could straighten the eye with an operation. The cost is not excessive.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl and would like to get up a party for my schoolmates and friends. What would be nice to serve for a lap supper? ANXIOUS.

Brown bread and white bread sandwiches with different fillings and cut in different shapes. Little fancy cakes or "kisses," ice cream or gelatine dessert with whipped cream. Hot chocolate or a fruit punch.

Serve with whipped cream.

Peanut Cookies.—Stir together three cups flour, two rounded teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt; add good half cup crushed peanuts and rub into this a tablespoon of butter; add 1 1/4 cups sweet milk. Stir into a batter that can be laid on a well floured breadboard and rolled to thickness of half an inch. Handle as little as possible, cut with biscuit cutter and bake in hot oven.

IF TOMORROW IS YOUR BIRTHDAY.

Watch your step. You can thereby avoid something unpleasant. Your next year will be prosperous and you will be happy in the society of dear ones. If in employ you will be advanced.

Those born Sunday, March 2, will be generally fortunate and will rise by their own merits. In disposition they will be agreeable and affectionate, but will not confine their affections to narrow limits.

Fads and Fashion

New York, Feb. 27.—Among the most tempting offerings in the line of new fabrics displayed in the shops are the heavy silks. The heavy, lustrous failles, ottomans, bengalines, poplins, and Bedford cords, in which beautiful colorings, promise a far greater variety than was possible last Spring with its monotonous black, blue or taupe satin suit, repeated in wearying sameness. Silk covert cloth is another interesting novelty.

For more dressy gowns the broadened silks will be used, especially in combination with plain silks of the same shade. Broadened silk wraps will be found with plain one-piece dresses. A plain charming costume, in a shade between tan and yellow, has a loose medium-length coat of broadened silk. Poplins on which a salt-tinted satin brocade appears are used in combination with plain poplins of the same shade. Plain and moire poplins are also combined.

There are many new weaves in black and white worsteds which furnish interesting variations from the traditional shepherd's plaid. They will find a place in the tailored skirts to be worn with coats of a plain color.

Women who are ordering Spring walking suits would do well to curb their own or their tailor's inclinations to drag the skirts into real bunchiness. Many of the best houses show a good proportion of almost or quite plain skirts in these strictly trotting suits. Paris even displays a very noticeable number of tailored gowns with pleated skirts, some of them regular "kilted" skirts, though with quite narrow pleats, others with pleated sections. An ingenious way of securing additional width, when desired, is offered in an imported model which has a plain panel buttoned on over a slightly full back. This can be unbuttoned up as far as one wishes and does not have the appearance of an intentional makeshift, but seems a legitimate feature of the design.

Sleeves are of such endless variety that a woman must be difficult indeed to please if she cannot satisfy her individual preferences. Long, short and three-quarter ones are shown side by side in exhibitions of blouses, while the long and the three-quarter ones divide the coats between them according to the type of these garments. Another feature of the design, in the latter case the sleeves often have deep-turned back cuffs trimmed with good-sized buttons and simulated buttonholes made of silk.

Armholes show almost as wide a variety. Some begin close under the arm, but run up to the collar, making a raglan shoulder, the top of the sleeve continuing to a point at the neck. Others begin in the usual shoulder seam on top, but run down to a point at the belt. In other cases an over-pleat, cut very low back and front, falls from the shoulder in a wide open armhole all the way to the hips. The moderate woman with this is of a different material and has its own armhole about three inches below the usual shoulder seam. Chinese sleeves are also shown in certain rather sensational models of an extreme type.

Broadcloth is finding a place in the season's new designs in combination with silk or satin. Several of the short jackets shown are in broadcloth. One model has a skirt of oyster satin trimmed with the broadcloth. This one is reversed in another model. In still another model the coat is of blue broadcloth trimmed with brick-red, one of the conspicuous new shades, while the skirt is of blue rayon pompadour silk, printed with designs in which the brick red predominates. The skirt has a triple flounce of the silk and a long panel of the cloth.

This rayon pompadour is really a new finish of foulard. It is supple in quality, comes in the new colorings, and is well adapted to the draping so universal in silk costumes.

Crepe de Chine underwear is practical as well as pretty, for a good quality of crepe de Chine washes as well as muslin. There is a growing use of this sort of underwear. It is sold now in pink, blue and white. It is all trimmed with lace, some of it elaborately. Crepe de Chine petticoats are ideal because of their light weight and clinging softness. They are generally finished at the bottom with a pleated flounce of wide lace. Some of them show an insertion of lace five or six inches wide and a hem of the crepe below the insertion. The more elaborate petticoats are trimmed with ribbon and chiffon ruffles and tiny artificial flowers. Some of the combinations and chemises of crepe de Chine are simply made, and these are especially serviceable. For the woman who is traveling they are a boon indeed, for they can be worn without being ironed. Hung up damp, their own weight smooths them from wrinkles.

Striking Bulgarian effects are seen in buttons, as well as other trimmings. The rich colors show off to special advantage in contrast with clear crystal. The new styles are strikingly original in shape, color and combination. In addition to the Bulgarian effects there are crystals with pompadour floral decorations, clear and delicately colored crystals with quaint settings of rhinestones and some cup-shaped crystals in colors with clear crystal centers and black and white striped effects. A striking novelty in a flat four-holed clear crystal has a black center from which radiate tiny bead-like spokes. A gold rim surrounds the black portion and decorates the edge.

Bulgarian crochets in ball and semi-ball designs are worked in novel knot stitch with a central floral decoration in rich Bulgarian colors. A button of this kind would transform the plainest gown into one of distinction. Cotton crochets in white and champagne will be used on dresses of linen, rayon and similar materials. A novel ratine button which is made of ratine arranged in sections and joined together will also be used on ratine dresses.

Rhinestone stud buttons in cluster effects of three, either in bar or triangle shape, and also rhinestone in combination with pearl will be widely used.

Among the novelties are painted china buttons in designs of miniature roses, pansies, forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley. Deft blue and heliotrope are among the favored color combinations. Another interesting novelty button which springs from the oriental fashion is an old gold or silver ball button in filigree work.

The velvet girdle is apparently to be a feature of the new lingerie frocks. Velvet of any shade which carries out whatever color scheme the makers of the frock may have in mind is fitted across in soft folds rather tightly drawn about the waist, and sometimes in a high V-shaped point inverted, reaching well over the bust. The embroidery of the gown partly hides the outline of these velvet girdles usually, but they show forth in all their softness and brilliancy in the waist, in front or back. Ribbon girdles are made in flowered designs, in black and white and colored satins, and in designs of oriental coloring and figure.

That is the Overland.
They don't build only 5,000 of them; nor even 10,000. If they produced no more than that number of cars, they too, would have to ask at least $1300 for the beautiful car we offer at $985 F. O. B. Toledo.

They build 40,000 cars this season. They contract for the raw material for this enormous production at one time, pay for it in cash, and thereby secure the best the markets afford, at the lowest prices.

The price includes everything needed for comfortable touring; acetylene engine starter, gas tank, gas and oil lamps, genuine mohair top and top covering, clear vision, rain-vision windshield, Warner speedometer, horn, robe-rail, foot-rest, tire carriers in the rear of the car, etc.

The Overland motor is the best of its type. Some motors—this is an important point—have three main bearings, some only two. Overland motors have five large main bearings; that's one of the reasons why they work without trouble. The whole motor is built for power and endurance.

The Overland model 69 rear axle is of a new and improved type, three-quarter floating; this axle system has all the advantages of the full-floating axle, but none of the shortcomings of the semi-floating axle usually found in cars of moderate price.

The brakes are of new design, overlarge, gradual but powerful in application. They will hold the car anywhere.

In Overland cars the transmission is combined with the rear axle and the drive is in a straight line. Both these features make for saving of engine power and smooth and quiet running.

Come and take a look at it. Compare it with others. Take a ride in the big, fully equipped Overland; it involves no obligation on your part. Then draw your own conclusions. That's all.

A Tip to the Small Realty Dealer

By this we mean the man whose capital is too small to permit him to hire the services of an expert advertising writer and adviser, yet a fellow who is WISE enough to KNOW that he can't afford NOT to advertise SOME, and with gumption enough to spend a LITTLE money if he can be SHOWN how and where it will prove PROFITABLE to HIM.

The tip: The Gazette maintains a corps of advertising writers—men capable of taking "points" furnished by you regarding your properties, and converting them into a SMALL ADVERTISEMENT, written in a strong, convincing manner—one calculated to interest "prospects" in what YOU have to sell.

AND THEIR SERVICES ARE FREE TO YOU.

Gazette advertising men are trained to consider advertising from YOUR side of the fence as well as from that of The Gazette.

They are trained to sell a man only the amount of space that he can AFFORD to use. They do not "stretch" advertisements beyond the wish or limit favorable to the advertiser.

Phone to The Gazette and let us send one of these men to call upon you.

If you don't "deal" it won't cost you a cent, and if you do "deal" it will cost you only for the space you decide to use in The Gazette.

And remember—your ad in The Gazette will reach over four thousand MORE families than are reached by any other Janesville daily newspaper.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, March 1, 1873.—The special meeting of supervisors, noted yesterday, will be called for the 12th inst. It is contemplated because the business is the repairing and remodeling of the county poor house so as to give its inmates light and ventilation while in the separate apartments. Supt. Pickett, who has managed the poor farm for six or eight years, has proposed a plan which will change the lighting and air by changing the rooms into light airy ones instead of poorly ventilated ones. These changes would be far more conducive to the health of the inmates than under the present arrangement. As Mr. Pickett understands the situation completely his suggestion will be valuable to the board in its deliberation upon the subject.

Professor Hollingshead delivered his fifth lecture in the Apollo Hall last night to a large and well pleased audience, his subject being "Telescopes and Astronomical Observations." At the conclusion of the lecture, which was deservedly applauded, a number of astronomical and other beautiful views were exhibited preparatory to the clearing of the floor for the dance. Next Friday Mr. Charles E. Jones, a new-comer from the British Colony of Victoria, is to deliver his very interesting lecture on Australia, describing its natural phenomena and social growth and we have no doubt that his contribution will prove very acceptable. The old hunters of the town of Clinton are on the war path for wolf scalps.

Freezing Not Harmful to Fishes. Fishes do not need to maintain a uniform or nearly even bodily temperature, and they can be frozen solid and thawed out months afterwards without injury to their health. If the process is not too sudden. Such changes happen to millions of them every year in the rivers of the colder parts of Siberia.

The STOLEN SINGER

by MARTNA BELLINGER

Agatha called the old dog to her again. This time he came near, rubbed hard against her dress, and, when she sat down on a flat tombstone, laid his head comfortably in her lap, wagging his tail in satisfaction.

Danny was a companion who did not obstruct thought, but encouraged it; and as Agatha sat resting on the stone with Danny close by, in that quiet yard full of the noiseless ghosts of the past, her thought went back to James. His unattractive eyes and restless spirit haunted her. She thought of that other night on the water, full of heartbreaking struggle as it was, as a happy night compared to the one which was yet to come. She realized their foolish talk while they were on the beach, and smiled sadly over it. Her courage was at the ebb. She felt that the buoyancy of spirit that had sustained them both during the night of struggle could never revisit the wasted and disorganized body lying in Parson Thayer's house—her house. A certain practical sense that was strong in her rose and questioned whether she had done everything that could be done for his welfare. She thought so. Had she not even prayed, with all her concentration of mind and will? She heard again Susan Stoddard's deep voice: "No striving toward God is ever lost!" In spite of her unfaith, a sense of rest in a power larger than herself came upon her. Unaware, Danny, who had wandered away, came back and sat down heavily on the edge of her skirt, close to her. "Good Danny!" she praised, petting him to his heart's content.

It was thus that Aleck Van Camp found them, as he came over the stile from the house. His tones were slower and more precise than ever, but his face was drawn and marked with anxiety. He had a careful thought for Agatha, even in the face of his great trouble.

"You have chosen a bad hour to wander about, Miss Redmond. The evening dew is heavy."

"Yes, I know; Danny and I were just going home. Have you been into the house?"

"Yes, I left Doctor Thayer there in consultation with the other physician that came today. They sent me off. Old Jim—well, you know as well as I do. With your permission, I'm going to stay the night. I'll bunk in the hall, or anywhere. Don't think of a bed for me; I don't want one."

"I'm glad you'll stay. It seems, somehow, as if every one helps; that is, every one who cares for him."

"Doctor Thayer thinks there will be a change tonight, though it is difficult to tell. Jim's family have my telegram by this time, and they will get my letter tomorrow, probably. Anyway, I shall wait until morning before I send another message."

The tension of their thoughts was too sharp; they turned for relief to the scene before them, stopping at the stile to look back at the steeped white church, standing under its spreading balm-of-Gilead tree.

"It seems strange," said Agatha, "to think that I sat out there under that big tree as a little girl. Everything is so different now."

"Then, then, was once your home?"

"No, never my home, though it was once my mother's home. I used to visit here occasionally, years and years ago."

Aleck turned a sharp, though not unsympathetic, gaze upon Agatha. "I have told no one but Doctor Thayer, and he did not believe me. But it is quite true; the wreck saved me, probably from something worse, though I don't know what."

If there had been skepticism on Aleck's face for an instant it had disappeared. Instead, there was deep concern, as he considered the case.

"Had you ever seen the man Chatelard before?"

"Never to my knowledge."

"Did he visit you on board the yacht?"

"Only once. I was put into the charge of an old lady, a Frenchwoman, Madame Sofie; evidently a trusted chaperon, or nurse, or something like that. When I came to myself in a very luxurious cabin in the yacht, this old woman was talking to me in French—a strange melody that I could make nothing of. When I was better she questioned me about everything, saying 'Mon Dieu!' at every answer I made. Then she left and was gone a long time; and when she came back, that man was with her. I learned afterward that he was called Monsieur Chatelard. They both looked at me, arguing fiercely in such a furious French that I could not understand more than half they said. They looked as if they were appraising me, like an article for sale, but Madame Sofie held out steadily, on some point, against Monsieur Chatelard, and finally it appeared that she converted him to her own point of view. He went away very angry, and I did not see him again, except at a distance, until the night of the wreck."

"Did you find out where they were going, or who was back of their scheme?"

"No, nothing; or very little. There was money involved. I could tell that. But no names were mentioned, nor any places that I can remember. You see, I was ill from the effects of the chloroform, and frightened, too, I think."

"Don't wonder," said Aleck, wrinkling his homely face. He remained silent while he searched, mentally, for a clue.

"I found out, through my maid, who arrived today, that some one of the kidnapping party had been clever enough to send a false message to the hotel, explaining my sudden departure."

"I see, I see," said Aleck, going over the story in his mind. And presently, "Where does Hand come in? And how did Jim happen to be aboard the Jeanne D'Arc?"

"Hand was some sort of henchman to Monsieur Chatelard, I believe. And he told me that your cousin was picked up in New York harbor, swimming for life, it appeared. No one seemed to know any more."

Aleck stopped short, looked at Agatha, pursed his lips for a whistle and remained silent. They had arrived at the porch steps, and were tacitly waiting for the doctors to descend and give them, if possible, some encouragement for the coming night. But the story of the Jeanne D'Arc had grown more complicated than Aleck had anticipated, and much was yet to be explained. Aleck was slow, as always, in thinking it through, but he figured it out, finally, to a certain point, and expressed himself thus: "That's the way with your steady fellows; they're all the bigger fools when they do jump."

"Pardon me, I didn't catch—"

"Oh, nothing," said Aleck, half irritably. "I only said Jim needed a poke, like that heifer over in the next field."

Agatha understood the boyish irritation, cloaking the love of the man. "You may be able to get more information about your cousin from Mr. Hand," she said. "He would be likely to know as much as anybody."

"Well, however it happened, he's here now!"

"Though if it had not been for his fearful struggle for me he would not have been so ill," said Agatha miserably. Aleck, with one foot on the low step of the piazza, stopped and turned squarely toward her. His face was no less miserable than Agatha's, but behind his wretchedness and anxiety was some masculine reserve of power, and a longer view down the corridors of time. He held her eye with a look of great earnestness.

"I love old Jim, Miss Redmond. We've been boys and men together, and good fellows always. But don't think that I'd regret his struggle for you, as you call it, even if it should mean the worst. He couldn't have done otherwise, and I wouldn't have had him. And if it's to be a home run—why, then, Jim would like that far better than to die of old age or liver complaint. It's all right, Miss Redmond."

Aleck's slow words came with a double meaning to Agatha. She heard, through them, echoes of James Hambleton's boyhood; she saw a picture of his straight and dauntless youth. She held out to Aleck a hand that trembled, but her face shone with gratitude.

Aleck took her hand respectfully, kindly, in his warm grasp. "Besides," he said simply, "we won't give up. He's got a fighting chance yet."

CHAPTER XVII.

The Turn of the Tide.

Lights in a country house at night are often the signal of birth or death, sometimes of both. The old red house threw its beacon from almost every window that night, and seemed mutely to defy the onslaught of enveloping darkness, whether Plutonic or Stygian. Time was when Parson Thayer's library lamp burned nightly into the little hours, and through the uncurtained windows the churchyard ghosts, had they wandered that way, could have seen his long thin form, wrapped in a pale cloth dressing-gown, sitting in the glow. He would have been reading some old leather-bound volume, and would have remained for hours almost as quiet and noiseless as the ghosts themselves. Now he had stepped across the threshold and joined them, and new spirits had come to burn the light in the old red house.

Agatha, half-dressed, had slept, and woke feeling that the night must be far advanced. The house was very still, with no sound or echo of the incoherent tones which, for now many days, had come from the room down the hall. She lit a candle, and the sputtering match seemed to fill the house with noise. Her clock indicated a little past midnight. It was only twenty minutes since she had lain down, but she was wide awake and refreshed. While she was pinning up her hair in a big mass on the top of her head, she heard in the hall slow, steady steps, firm but not heavy, even as in daytime. Susan Stoddard did not tiptoe.

Agatha was at the door before she could knock.

"You had better come for a few minutes," Mrs. Stoddard said. The tones were, in themselves, an adjuration to faith and fortitude.

"Yes, I will come," said Agatha. They walked together down the dimly lighted hall, each woman in her own way proving how strong and efficient is the discipline of self-control.

In the sick-room a screen shaded the light from the bed, which had been pulled out almost into the middle of the room. Near the bed was a table with bottles, glasses, a covered pitcher, and on the floor an oxygen tank. Doctor Thayer's massive figure was in the shadow close to the bed, and Aleck Van Camp leaned over the curved footboard. James lay on his pillow, a ghost of a man, still as death itself. As Agatha grew accustomed to the light, she saw that his eyes were closed, the lips under the ragged beard were drawn and slightly parted; his forehead was the pallid forehead of death-in-life. Neither the doctor nor Aleck moved or turned their gaze from the bed as Agatha and Mrs. Stoddard entered. The air was still, and the profound silence without was as a mighty reservoir for the silence within.

Agatha stood by the footboard beside Aleck, while Mrs. Stoddard, getting a warm freestone from the fireplace, placed it beneath the bedclothes. Aleck Van Camp dropped his head, covering his face with his hands. Agatha, watching by and by a change come over the sick man's face. She held her breath, it seemed for untold minutes, while Doctor Thayer reached his hand to the patient's heart and leaned over to observe more closely his face.

"See!" she whispered to Aleck, touching his shoulder lightly, "he is looking at us." When Aleck looked up James was indeed looking at them with large, serious, half-focused eyes. It was as if he were coming back from another world where the laws of vision were different, and he was only partially adjusted to the present conditions. He moved his hands feebly under the bedclothes, where they were being warmed by the freestone, and then tried to moisten his lips. Agatha took a glass of water from the table, looked about for a napkin, but, seeing none, wet the tips of her fingers and placed them gently over James' lips. His eyes followed her at first, but closed for an instant as she came near. When they opened again, they looked more natural. As he felt the comfort of the water on his lips, his features relaxed, and a look of recognition illumined his face. His eyes moved from Agatha to Aleck, who was now bending over him, and back to Agatha. The look was a salute, happy and peaceful. Then his eyes closed again.

For an hour Agatha and Aleck kept their watch, almost fearing to breathe. Doctor Thayer worked, gave quiet orders, tested the heartbeats, let no movement or symptom go unnoticed. For a time James kept even the doctor in doubt whether he was slipping into the Great Unknown or into a deep and convalescent sleep. By the end of the hour, however, Jimmy had decided for natural sleep, urged there, perhaps, by that unseen playwright who had decreed another time for curtain; or perhaps he was kept by Doctor Thayer's professional persuasions, in defiance of the prompter's signal. However the case, the heart slowly but surely began to take up its job like an honest force-pump, the face began to lose its death-like pallor, the breathing became more nearly normal. Doctor Thayer, with Mrs. Stoddard quiet and efficient at his elbow, worked and tested and worked again, and finally sat motionless for some minutes, watch in hand, counting the pulsations of James' heart. At the end of the time he laid the hand carefully back under the clothes, put his watch in his pocket, and finally got up and looked around the room.

GAVE HIM NEW LIFE

James H. Clark of Lowell, Mass., Says Father John's Medicine Has Done His Throat Trouble More Good Than Anything He Has Ever Taken.

I have suffered all my life from throat troubles and asthma which I inherited from my father. Sometimes the asthma has been so bad that for weeks I could not go to bed.

About all the money I could earn was spent for doctor's fees, but none of them seemed to do me much good. Since I began to take Father John's Medicine, it has given me new life, and it has done me more good than anything I have ever taken. I am taking this wonderful medicine right along and am sure that it is going to cure me. All my family takes Father John's Medicine, and we would not be without it in the house. DINNER STORIES

Miss Arabella—Don't you think I look dreadfully pale, doctor?

The Doctor—Yes, indeed, you do, mademoiselle.

"Then what do you advise me to do?"

"Wipe some of the powder off your face."

Bismarck was no favorite with women, least of all clever women, who dared to think for themselves and imagine that they could fathom questions of state. He was never tired of snubbing strong-minded ladies, putting them down and stamping on them.

One day he paid a visit to the Russian embassy at Berlin, where he behaved as usual, floating over the mistress of the house, the Countess Schouvaloff herself. He took his leave at length, to the relief of everybody.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

A PAIR

It was early in February, yet, as the girl walked, she held her head high.

She paused as the aged beggar woman held forth an entreating brown claw, with pitting eye begging that the ancient woman was thinly clad in a brown alpaca princess, trimmed with holly berries and caught up at the side with twisted organdy.

"For sweet charity's sake, kind lady! My second husband lies ill of the gout and my fourteen children left me soon after they died! For sweet charity's sake, kind lady!"

The girl, still with her head held high, gazed steadily at her for some moments, and then said kindly:

"I think more people would help you, poor thing, if only your appearance were a little more presentable. Now, I represent the Health and Beauty Publishing Company, 111 D. Inc., Illinois. A judicious person of Alameda—Fanny's latest book, 'Aids to the Wrinkled,' ought to increase your income 50 per cent."

And with tears of gratitude in both eyes, the aged woman paid up.

Many people scan the want ad every day for some thing perhaps, that you have to sell. Why not let them know it?

WATSON sprang up at the approach of Mrs. Morgan, a stout little lady who bore a striking resemblance to England's late queen. Drawing a chair beside his own, he said, with a profound bow:

"Will your majesty deign to be seated?"

Mrs. Morgan paused a second, doubtfully, and then, without a trace of her usual smile, swept by, saying:

"I thank you, Mr. Watson. I wish to speak to Miss Perkins."

"By George!" muttered the young man, watching her until she joined a group of elderly ladies farther down the hotel veranda. "Now, what is the cause of this sudden coolness?"

He shook his head in perplexity, and started down toward the boat-landing. Near the lake he overtook the Barlow girls.

"Going on the water?" he began, but stopped short as he caught sight of the quick look of dismay that passed between them.

The elder of the two turned to her sister. "We'd better go back now," she said hastily. "I think mama will be waiting for us."

Watson stared open-mouthed at their retreating figures for a moment, then went, wondering, on his way. He reached the boat-landing just as a launch containing a party of young people was passing. Ethel Carter, seated in the bow beside Jim Spencer, waved her hand at him, but the others seemed unconscious of his proximity.

"Halloa!" he called. "Don't you want another passenger?"

There was a moment's ominous silence before Jim called back:

"Sorry, old man—no more room."

"Lyn cad!" growled Watson.

Savagely, he unfurled the painter of a skiff and rowed off in a direction opposite to that taken by the launch. At the top that evening he felt that "taboo" was written across his back in huge letters. No one would dance with him except Ethel, and their one waltz was cut short by the girl's vigilant aunt.

After the dance he stalked away to an open window. He was standing there in a Napoleonic attitude, with folded arms and gloomy brow, gazing out at the moonlight, when a plump little hand slipped within his arm, and Mrs. Morgan's voice whispered:

"Come outside. I want to talk with you."

She led him to a secluded corner of the veranda, and, sitting down, motioned him to a chair beside her.

"I think it is high time for you to know the absurd gossip that is flying about," she began, "and as a true friend of yours I am going to afford you an opportunity to defend yourself. Is James Spencer a friend of yours?"

The abruptness of the question confused Watson, and he stammered out:

"Why, he's a fellow townman and an old schoolmate and—"

"And you don't love him. Very well. He doesn't love you either, I fancy. I heard a shocking rumor this morning, and, determining to get to the bottom of it, I interviewed Kitty Perkins after luncheon. The rumor was started by that Spencer man."

She pointed her pudgy little forefinger at him tragically.

"Is it loaded, your majesty?" he asked, pretending to dodge the threatening digit.

"Don't joke," said she impressively. "It is a serious matter to you and all your friends—and you have many of them. You have been very popular here. We all like you, not simply because you are a man where men are scarce, but because you are friendly without being flirtatious, funny, but not foolish—er—"

"Fascinating, but not fast," suggested Watson.

"Yes—precisely. Now comes that Spencer man. Whether he was jealous of your popularity, or wished to injure your reputation in the eyes of a certain young lady, I don't know. At all events, he mentioned to Kitty Perkins and the other girls that you had been in the penitentiary."

"Of course, in a few hours, everybody knew of it, and now you are ostracized. I want you to give me authority to deny the slander, and I'll stop the mouths of those gossip girls in short order and send that contemptible Spencer liar packing by the morning boat."

The young man shifted his chair so as to bring his face into the shadow. After a brief silence, he said, in a strained voice:

"You need not deny the report, Mrs. Morgan. It is all true."

She drew away from him slightly.

"You were in prison? Oh, I am sorry! Of course you will have to leave us, then."

"Leave? Not I!" cried he decidedly, doggedly. "I will stay and fight it out. My record has been clean and clear ever since. Is a man to be boycotted all his life? I am going to stay."

"I admire your pluck, but I am afraid you can't stand it," she answered sympathetically. "However, you can count on me to help in any way possible. I believe in giving every one a chance, and I am not one to desert my friends when they need me."

She held out her hand, and he pressed it warmly.

"Thank you," he responded feelingly. "Trouble enables a man to find out who are his true friends."

He hesitated a moment and then continued questioningly:

"Mrs. Morgan, if a girl cared for a man and found out that he had been in the penitentiary, would she turn him down?"

"It depends upon the girl. You mean Ethel Carter, of course. I believe she would be true to a man, if she loved him. But there's her aunt, you know."

"Yes, I know."

The following morning, chasing under the constant snubbing encountered on all sides, he started along the path that ran from the hotel to the top of Roger's Rock. As he approached the observatory, he caught sight of Ethel standing with her back toward him, gazing down at the lake. Suddenly she turned and hastened to him with a cordial smile and both hands extended, exclaiming:

"I thought it was your step."

He seized the little brown hands and drew her close until he could gaze straight down into the dark eyes.

"You know; and yet you are not ashamed to be my friend still." His tone was not questioning, but exultant.

"Yes, I know," she said quietly. "I saw Mrs. Morgan this morning. Is it really true?"

"Yes," he replied, loosening his grasp of her hands.

But she did not at once withdraw them. She did not even draw back from him; she merely gazed steadily, searchingly, into his eyes, and continued to gaze, until he felt the hot blood rush into his face, and felt such a longing to crush her to him that he suddenly dropped her hands and thrust his own into his coat-pockets.

"Can't we sit down?" he said awkwardly.

"Why, certainly," she replied, leading the way into the observatory.

"So you don't think any the less of me for being a jailbird?" he remarked, when they were seated. "If you will trust me a little while I—"

"I do trust you now," she rejoined, "and I feel sure you were not very much to blame."

"By George!" he cried impulsively, leaning toward her. "If you care for me, it matters not what the whole world thinks. He straightened up and, removing his cap, ran his fingers nervously through his crisp, curly hair.

"I didn't intend to say that at this time," he went on, "but, since it has slipped out unintentionally, I want to tell you that I love you, Ethel. I should have proposed to you last year, if your confounded aunt's money—I beg your pardon, I mean your aunt's confounded money—had not been in the way. If you remain free, I'll propose quickly enough in a year or two, when I can offer you a home with some luxury—besides myself."

He smiled whimsically, and the girl smiled in return—somewhat wistfully, as if she were not getting just what she wanted.

"Don't want to bind you now by an engagement," he continued. "I don't wish to do anything to antagonize your aunt and injure your prospects; or, on the other hand, do I want our household to be supported by your aunt's money. What I do want is to know if you care enough for me to wait a couple of years—if you can give me hope for the future."

She sat calmly, with her hands demurely folded in her lap, until he had concluded. Then she replied quietly:

"I like you, Mr. Watson, and I shall wait for you."

Some men would have been chilled and repelled by her manner, but he liked it. Big and nervous himself, he found in her a calmness and repose that rested and satisfied him. Lifting her hand to his lips, he kissed it tenderly, holding it a moment caressingly.

"Thank you, little girl," said he. "Now we understand each other. It is a great comfort to know that you believe in me in spite of all."

The brilliant spot of red in each of her cheeks indicated that inwardly she was far from calm. Had he been some years younger, and had he noted the expression that glowed in her dark eyes while she gazed down at the blue water, he would have cast aside all his bachelor theories, gathered her in his arms then and there, and said that he wanted her at once. But, like her self, he was viewing with unseeing eyes the lake far below, his sunburnt face wearing a look of supreme content.

Finally the girl broke the silence.

"It promises to be a fine night for the excursion to Fort Ticonderoga. You are going, of course?"

"No. I have not been asked," he replied.

"I think it is horrid of them!" she exclaimed. "Then I shall not go, either."

"I tell you what," said he, "we'll have a little trip of our own this evening on the lake, and we'll take Mrs. Morgan as ballast. If ostracism means that you and I are to be thrown together constantly, then I shall bless it and the prison-bars."

It was late that evening when they returned from the water. Leaving Mrs. Morgan at the hotel, they walked in silence through the dim, tree-arched path until they reached the steps of Ethel's cottage. Then the girl cried out in sudden dismay:

"Good gracious! I left my night-key on the dresser in my room. What shall we do. I don't like to wake my aunt."

He thought a moment.

"You say the key is in your room? If the window is unfastened, and I had a ladder—"

"You'd climb up and get it. Well, one of my windows is unfastened, the one on the side of the cottage, and the painters left a ladder on the grass."

"Good!" said he. "You sit down here and wait."

He found the ladder, climbed to the room, procured the key, and descended safely. But as his feet touched the ground, a hoarse whisper came to him through the darkness:

"Hold up your hands!"

He turned and found himself facing the shadowy figure of a man, a revolver in his outstretched hand. Instead of obeying, however, he darted around the cottage and down the road. Behind him he could hear heavy footsteps and a voice called peremptorily:

"Stop, or I'll fire!"

Watson stopped and faced about.

"Oh, it's you!" he cried in a tone of relief, as he recognized the hotel's watchman.

"Yes, it's me," panted the man, "and I want to know—By goosh! If it ain't Watson, the jailbird! Up to your old tricks, hey? Burglar!" Now, you march straight to the hotel, and don't you run ag'in, or I'll shoot!"

"But my good man—" began Watson. "Shut up! Keep back!" growled the man. "I ain't takin' no chances with an old bird like you. Go on, now! March!"

Watson marched, reaching the hotel just as the excursionists from the fort dropped up.

"Halloa! What's the matter?" cried Spencer, as the young people gathered around the pair.

"Burglar! housebreaking!" responded the watchman triumphantly. "Over to the Carter cottage. I nabbed him as he climbed down from the window."

"Well, of all things!" "The Carters! Perfectly outrageous!" were the audible comments.

At that instant Ethel herself pushed hurriedly through the group, and, clasping Watson's arm with both hands, panted:

"Stop! Let me explain. I had left my night-key up-stairs, and Mr. Watson, at my request, climbed into the window to get it. And, any way, it's all right"—with a defiant glance around—"for we are to be married this fall."

"Bravo, little girl!" whispered Watson. Then he turned to the others. "Since explanations are in order," he said, "let me state now what no one has taken the trouble to ask—the reason why I was in prison. I was employed there for a short time in a business capacity as an expert accountant. I bid you all good night."

With a mocking smile and bow, he led Ethel away. When they were beyond earshot, the girl exclaimed:

"Why didn't you say that before?"

"It seemed such a rich joke. I was curious to know how it would feel to be unpopular, and," he hesitated a moment, "to see how it would affect you."

"Me!" she cried. "You foolish darling! You might have been a horse-chief for all I care."

The Theatre

"MUTT AND JEFF."

From all over the country comes glowing reports of Gus Hill's phenomenally successful comedy, "Mutt and Jeff." The attraction is the biggest winner the theatrical business has known in years and from all accounts is not yet even in the zenith of its popularity. Six companies are presenting the piece in various parts of the United States and England and Australia are soon to see it.

There is an interesting story, here—rights?" asked Mr. Hill of the artist. Fisher mentioned a certain sum. Mr. Hill thought it over and a few days later sent for "Bud."

"I'll give you so much money" and he named a figure which at the time was reasonably large.

Fisher decided that it was too small and entered into communication with several other managers. They promised to give the piece immediate production but were so long-winded about it that Fisher became discour-

a surprise from the outset. The play caught on in a big way and the receipts from the various companies have been remarkable. In one season alone Fisher is said to have pulled down something like $25,000, while Mr. Hill has made a fortune; which all goes to illustrate that delays sometimes are not dangerous—providing of course, you are lucky. "Mutt and Jeff" will be at Myers theatre, Tuesday evening, March 4.

"THE ROSE MAID"

Owing to the fact of its being forced out of the Colonial theatre in Chicago through previous booking of "The Politics of 1912," "The Rose Maid" with its great metropolitan cast and chorus of nearly 100 people, its special orchestra and three car loads of scenery, will be the attraction at the Myers theatre on Wednesday evening March 5. This is rather an unexpected event, as the original bookings of this magnificent production included not only the larger metropolitan centers. It is really a gala occasion and one of the most pretentious in this season's offerings.

From all reports the piece has challenged the beautiful "Spring Maid," its score being tuneful and delightful. Everywhere that it has appeared orchestras are featuring its seductive "Roses Bloom for Lovers" and other melodic gems with which it is filled.

Verba and Loeschner who also produced "The Spring Maid" have tried to eclipse their splendid work in the above named opera, in this, their latest work and they have spared neither time nor expense to accomplish this result. It is a much more elaborate production than "The Spring Maid" at times bordering on the spectacular.

The composer, Bruno Granichat-aeden adds a new name to the list of Viennese composers who have set the world a-walking and he is the first of the foreign opera kings to come to America to witness his opera in English. His splendid co-operation in its production last year has added much to its value. The music is declared to be both light and ambitious.

The large and attractive chorus of "The Rose Maid" has so impressed one of the leading newspaper critics of New York as to cause him to feelingly refer to it in his interview as a "rosebud garden of girls." And thus girls can sing too. Be-rett of their good looks they could still win approval with their voices.

TRAINING SCHOOL NOTES.

Mrs. Walter Smith and son, Floyd, of Avon, and Mrs. Ida Bron of Beloit, visited the training school on Tuesday.

Mrs. John Olmstead of Orfordville, sister of Hazel Logan, spent a portion of Friday afternoon at the school.

Principal Louth spent Monday visiting the schools at Clinton and Milton Junction. At both places he spoke to the high school students concerning the subject of training schools in Wisconsin, their purpose and work. The service of the Rock county school was also discussed.

The new book on sanitation used by the seniors in the physiology class is proving valuable as a preparation for the duties of a country teacher.

Under present arrangements students have charge of the matter of ringing bells for the moving of classes. The plan works very satisfactorily. Study periods are also regulated by the students themselves.

Miss Jacobson visited country schools near Orfordville on Wednesday, and near Milton on Friday. This visitation is a regular part of the training school service.

The training school will be in session on Saturday, March 8th, for the benefit of rural teachers and others who may care to visit us at that time. The class of 1912 is invited to a conference at this time.

Our practice teachers are making use of the various exhibits in their instruction in the grades.

The members of the senior geography methods class paced off the school grounds on Friday and found that the Jefferson school block contains about two acres.

Principal Louth told the students on Friday morning about his three days of visitation this week.

The principal spent Tuesday visiting the Whitewater normal school, and on Thursday he put in the day at Madison, conferring relative to bills upon matters of rural education and improvement.

Three of the student teachers have had practice classes in the training school rooms. The practice work is going forward quite successfully.

Mrs. Madden and Miss Fritzsche of Edgerton were callers at the training school Wednesday noon.

Miss Elsie Pope of Janesville spent some time at the school Tuesday afternoon.

Margaret Mawhinney and Vera Irving attended the wedding of Miss Mawhinney's sister on Wednesday.

The juniors will prepare and serve the spread for Saturday, March 8th.

A meeting of the training school board is called for Wednesday, March 5th, in the office of Superintendent Antisdel.

The meeting of the County Teachers' association occurs in Beloit on Saturday, March 15.

It is hoped that the teachers are making use of pictures in geography. Many can be secured just for the asking.

SUFFERED TORMENT WITH ECZEMA

For Many Years. On Thigh. Also on Scalp. Awful Itching Skin. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

Lohman, O.—"My eczema started on my thigh with a small pimple. It also came on my scalp. It began to itch and I began to scratch. For eighteen or twenty years I could not tell what I passed through with that awful itching. I would scratch until the blood would soak through my underwear, and I couldn't talk to my friends on the street, but I would be disgusting and purchasing that spot, until I was very much ashamed. The itching was so intense I could not sleep after once in bed and warm. I certainly suffered torment with that eczema for many years. I chased after everything I ever heard of, all to no avail. I saw the advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. Imagine my delight when I applied the first dose to that awful itching fire on my leg and scalp, in less than a minute the itching on both places ceased. I got some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the second day I never had another itching spell, and Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me. I was troubled with awful dandruff all over my scalp. The Cuticura Soap has cured that trouble." (Signed) L. R. Plank, Jan. 22, 1912. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card, "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston." Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

The training school faculty will be pleased to answer questions sent in by the country teachers and it is expected that such teachers will write.

Her Formal Closing.

One evening little Helen stammered at the end of her prayer, evidently forgetting how to close. Then she said: "Oh, yes, very truly yours, Helen Smith."

Feminine Extortions.

They are few and far between, but still they exist. This rare member of the sex is the girl who actually asks men companions to purchase her anything for which she may take a fancy. It is decidedly unfair to the man, and he dislikes the feminine thoughtlessness. He will soon desert a girl who has the weakness. It is surely unfeminine.—Exchange.

Oldest Known Prescription.

The oldest prescription in the world is in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. It is on a piece of stone 3 1/2 inches in size and was probably written 2,500 years ago in Egypt. The prescription takes up both faces of the stone and is written in the old cursive characters, the compound being a remedy that was used for a fumigation.
